Chamberlain Sends Personal Plea to Hitler to Ease Crisis.

British Decision.

By Joseph Driscoll.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

London, Aug. 30.—The British Cabinet today decided to withhold a commitment to fight for the Czechs if they are attacked and to attempt to persuade Reichsfuehrer Hitler to agree to reorganization of Czechoslovakia into "another Switzerland" in which the Sudeten German, Hungarian and Polish minorities would be granted local administrations of their own.

Prime Minister Chamberlain later received American Ambassador Kennedy in the presence of the British Ambassador to Berlin, Sir Nevile Henderson, who had also attended the Cabinet deliberations. For an hour Kennedy received a full account of the situation, which he cabled to the State Department at Washington.

Kennedy came away from Downing street with the conviction that war is still unlikely in 1938. His meeting with the Prime Minister took on added significance from the fact the American Ambassadors to Berlin, London and Paris had a private conference of their own in Paris, Sunday.

Sudeten Reject Proposal.

[Meanwhile, United Press dispatches from Prague reported that the Sudeten Germans had rejected the "Switzerland" proposal, but that Viscount Runciman was urging them to reconsider.—Editor's note.]

Chamberlain entrained tonight for Balmoral, where he is to be minister in attendance to the King for several days and will report to his Majesty the latest developments in the European situation. Afterward, if Hitler behaves, Chamberlain hopes to go on to Speyside to continue his holiday.

Several hundred persons watched the arrival and departure of 18 cabinet members for their first exchange of views since Parliament adjourned a month ago.

An official communique issued as the meeting ended said:

"The foreign secretary made a full report of the international situation and at the conclusion of the meeting ministers expressed their entire agreement with the action already taken and the policy to be pursued in the future.

"No further meeting was arranged, but ministers will be re-

FRANK BANE.

Bane Resigns As Director of Social Security

Will Accept Directorship of States Co-ordinating Group.

Frank Bane, executive director of the Social Security Board since its inception three years ago, resigned yesterday to become executive director of the Council of State Governments, with headquarters in Chicago. His resignation will become effective November 1.

The board is considering selecting, as his successor, one of the organization's 12 regional directors, it was learned. Although no final decision has been reached, a successor may be named today or tomorrow.

The group with which Mr. Bane will become associated represents 36 State governments and is devoted to working out plans for cooperation among the States throughout the country.

Board officials said Bane's resignation was prompted by the fact that he would receive, as executive director of the council, a "substantially higher salary" than the $9,500 a year fixed by law for his present position.

Bane emphasized that no disagreement with policy or with other board officials was involved. His resignation was submitted some days ago.

He will succeed, as executive director of the council, Henry W. Toll, of Colorado, who also is executive director of the American Legislators' Association and will devote his full time to the latter position.

In announcing Bane's resignation, Arthur J. Altmeyer, board

Italians 'Neutral,' But Nazis' Friends In Czech Dispute

By the United Press.

Rome, Aug. 30.—Italy would not fight the western powers solely for the sake of the Sudeten Germans, but her ultimate stand in case of war would be dictated by the extent and duration of the clash and by the powers drawn in, well informed Fascists said tonight.

Italy's present position, they said, is that of a neutral observer, with the only difference being that she is a friend of Germany.

Arts Board Stalls D. C. Center Plan

Commission Discloses Opposition to Closing of Marshall Place.

PWA Allots $5,700,000 to Start Work on Main Building.

Sharp opposition by the Commission of Fine Arts to the closing of John Marshall place to permit construction of the new Municipal Center, may upset plans for the long-awaited project, for which the Public Works Administration yesterday approved a loan and grant of $5,700,000.

Construction of the main building of the center across John Marshall place, which runs through the center of the site, would obstruct the vista of the old courthouse from Pennsylvania avenue, it was pointed.

H. P. Caemmerer, secretary and administrative officer of the Fine Arts Commission, said last night his group had sent a recommendation to the District Commissioners advising against the closing of John Marshall place.

Plans Uncertain.

The PWA allotment was intended to permit the District to start construction of the center early this fall. Originally the Commissioners had requested $2,500,000 to begin the work, but it was reported they had submitted an alternate proposal more than doubling the original request.

The center will lie between C street and Indiana avenue, Third and Sixth streets northwest. John Marshall place is the only street dividing the site from north to south.

Although District officials were silent about what plans would be followed in construction of the center, it was understood they were uncertain whether to build one main building in the upper portion of the site and across John Marshall place, or to build two buildings, one on the west side of John Marshall place and one on the east.

Ickes to Act on Balance.

It was rumored meanwhile the PWA had eliminated a $2,750,000 project to build the National Guard Armory, as requested by the Commissioners.

There was no confirmation of the rumor, however. PWA Administrator Ickes is due today from a vacation in Alaska to act on the remaining projects on the District program. To date PWA has ap-

Curry Tells How Hines Halted Raids

Ousted Tammany Chief Says Hostile Police Were Shifted.

Former Sachem Charges Defendant Requested Dodge Nomination.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Aug. 30.—James J. Hines, a power in Tammany, accused of conspiring to protect Dutch Schultz's policy racket from police and courts, not only was able to transfer policemen at will when Tammany ruled the city, but was accustomed to exercise that power of transfer, John F. Curry, former leader of the Wigwam, testified late today at the Hines trial in Supreme Court.

Curry said he was the intermediary through whom the requests of district leaders for transfers of policemen went to police commissioners, and that the district leaders always had their way.

Defense Surprised.

Twenty-five to 50 times a year, he said, during the five years of his regime, the district leaders, including Hines, sent in their requests to him for action within the police department. He never inquired as to the motives of the leaders in seeking the transfers, he said, nor asked the reasons for them. He simply transmitted them to whatever police commissioner was in office, and always obtained the action desired.

Curry's testimony, a complete surprise to the defense, followed closely on the heels of testimony by Capt. William B. Bennett, commander of the chief inspector's squad in 1933, that he had dropped three policemen from his squad in October of that year at the command of Chief Inspector John O'Brien, and that his superior informed him that action was to be taken by direct command of the police commissioner. The commissioner, Capt. Bennett, was informed, gave no reason for his order.

Tells of Dodge Nomination.

The three policemen, Sergt. Thomas W. Gray, Detective James N. Canavan and Patrolman Raymond Stilley, testified today they were transferred after repeated raids on Harlem policy "banks" and "drops" operated by Dutch Schultz's mob. Two of them, Canavan and Stilley, told of threats made to them during these raids by George Weinberg, Schultz lieutenant and a star witness for the prosecution. Weinberg told them, they testified, that if they kept on

'Cotton Ed' Smith Victorious Over New Dealer in Carolina; McAdoo Trails But Is Gaining

1st Returns Give Downey Edge in 5-Man Senate Contest.

Heavy Vote Marks Vitriolic Primary

Olson Leads Dockweiler in Governor Race; O'Connor Is 5th.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Aug. 30.—Senator McAdoo, President Roosevelt's choice for re-election, trailed widely behind Sheridan Downey, San Francisco attorney, for the Democratic Senatorial nomination in early returns tonight from California's primary election.

Early returns were from southern California. McAdoo was gaining elsewhere.

Returns from 3,168 complete and incomplete precincts of 12,438 in the State, mostly from southern California, gave Downey, 98,337; McAdoo, 41,141; John W. Preston, 10,436, Ray L. Riley, 12,237, and James V. Mellen, 2,441.

Downey advocated a pension proposal under which all California jobless over 50 years old would be given $30 in scrip weekly. The plan was censured by McAdoo and President Roosevelt.

Olson in Lead.

In the eight-cornered race for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, a contest in which the President took no part, State Senator Culbert L. Olson, who is sympathetic toward the New Deal, took an early lead, with Representative John F. Dockweiler close behind.

Returns from 1,696 complete and incomplete precincts gave Olson 45,387; Dockweiler, 33,997; Herbert Legg, 23,458; Raymond L. Haight, 11,727; J. F. T. O'Connor, former comptroller of the currency, 9,097, Daniel C. Murphy, San Francisco County sheriff, 5,129; William H. Neblett, former McAdoo law partner, 2,165; T. A. Tomasini, 588.

First returns from the Republican Senatorial contest gave from 1,653 incomplete precincts, Philip Bancroft, militant Walnut Creek farmer, 21,491; Ray L. Riley, State railroad Commissioner, 13,199, and Louise Watkins, of Pasadena, 5,120.

Merriam Leading.

Gov. Frank F. Merriam took an early lead for the Republican renomination in returns from 1,696 precincts. The count stood, Merriam, 36,978; Haight, 10,182; George J. Hatfield, present lieutenant governor, 8,298; Francis O'Connor, 1,743, and Z. S. Leymel, 932.

Candidates in many races sought nomination by more than one party which is permitted under California law. The candidate, however, must

Tydings Leads in Poll; Roosevelt Jibes at 'Ad'

Warning of 'Invasion' Pathetic, Hysterical, President Says.

President Roosevelt said at his press conference yesterday that attempts to picture him as an "invader" in the Maryland Democratic primary amused him at first, but then made him sad.

The President was commenting on a newspaper advertisement prepared by the headquarters of Senator Tydings, whom the President is going to try and help defeat by visiting Maryland next week-end and by making a Labor Day speech on the Eastern Shore.

The advertisement, which is to appear in 76 Maryland newspapers this week, starts off with these words:

Citizens of Maryland!
Defend Your State
Against Federal Invasion

President Roosevelt, answering the question of a newspaper reporter, said that the advertisement was funny on its face, but that down deep it was pathetic and sad. What saddened him, he said, was that anybody would put out such a hysterical statement.

Lewis to Go Also.

With President Roosevelt when he goes into Maryland next Sunday and Monday will be Representative Lewis, New Deal candidate, who has the Chief Executive's blessing in the campaign to purge the Senate of Tydings. Lewis has described Tydings as a "Tory Republican."

With President Roosevelt also will be Harry Nice, Republican Governor of Maryland, and Representative T. Alan Goldsborough, of Denton, who has represented the Eastern Shore in the House for 16 years. He once thought of running against Tydings himself. Now he is backing Lewis.

The President will leave the White House Sunday and motor to Morgantown, Charles County, there to inspect the site of a proposed bridge across the Potomac. This part of southern Maryland has been strongly pro-Tydings, and Lewis hopes the President's journey will turn the tide in his favor.

After looking at the Morgantown bridge site—and possibly making a

Gallup Count Estimates Senator Now Has 58 Per Cent.

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, Aug. 30.—As political observers throughout the country turn their attention to the next great test of the Roosevelt "purge"—the Democratic primary in Maryland—preliminary returns in a Statewide survey by the American Institute of Public Opinion show Senator Millard E. Tydings leading his New Deal opponent, Representative David J. Lewis, in popular votes.

GALLUP.

Due to Maryland's peculiar system of county unit voting in its nominating primaries, the candidate with the majority of popular votes does not always win. The nomination goes to the candidate who carries a majority of the county unit votes of Maryland's 24 counties.

Nevertheless, preliminary returns in today's Institute survey give the first clear indication of popular sentiment in a race that has come to symbolize the bitter tug-of-war between conservatives and New Dealers for control of the Democratic Party.

If the Maryland primary were being held today, returns from a cross-section of Democratic voters show, Senator Tydings would lead his White House-approved rival by almost three to two in popular votes.

But voting today is still two weeks away—September 12—and there will be energetic homestretch campaigning by both sides.

Democratic Party Chairman James A. Farley has taken a hand in the fight, and New Dealers are counting on President Roosevelt to enter Maryland in person on Labor Day, next Monday, to speak in Lewis' behalf. How much this maneuver would help is impossible to

Hopkins Defends Roosevelt's Intervention in State Votes

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 30.—In a fighting speech, Harry L. Hopkins, Works Progress administrator, tonight heatedly defended President Roosevelt's intervention in State primaries "as a step in the direction of responsible Government."

In the most vigorous speech of his career as a New Deal spokesman, the lanky relief chief snapped, "To say this is not democracy is an insult to the voters, not to the President. He is clearing away the cobwebs and the confusion and making the issue plain before the voters who must pass on it."

Bitterly he attacked the men "who tricked the voters by wearing our insignia, only to turn against us as soon as they got into office," in obvious reference to old line Democratic Senators opposing the New Deal. He shouted:

"Even while they hacked away at the foundation of the program with one hand they were patting the President on the back with the other, protesting to the voters that they were really good Democrats."

Hopkins defended the manner in which the New Deal "has taken its case to the people," declaring flatly, "We refuse to be the first Administration in history to be muzzled and gagged."

He insisted that "officials of the Administation have not only the

Gallup Accuracy

Dr. George Gallup, director of the American Institute of Public Opinion, estimated in yesterday's Post that Senator Ellison D. Smith would lead Gov. Olin D. Johnston by a ratio of 57 to 43 in Tuesday's South Carolina primary. Early today the voting showed Smith, 150,171; Johnston, 123,370, in 1,347 precincts out of 1,509, or 54.9 to 45.1 in percentage. Gallup's accuracy is the more remarkable because of the withdrawal of State Senator Edgar Brown on the eve of the election.

Veteran Senator Defeats Gov. Johnston in 1st 'Purge' Test.

Maybank Heads Governor Battle

Margin Is 26,000 With Only 200 Districts Unreported.

By the Associated Press.

Columbia, S. C., Aug. 30.—Senator Smith, the first member of the Senate to face the test of the New Deal party purge, piled up a slowly mounting lead over his Roosevelt-indorsed opponent, Gov. Olin D. Johnston, as returns were tabulated from today's Democratic primary.

With 1,347 of the State's 1,509 precincts reported, Smith, a veteran of 30 years' service, who voted against several Administration measures, had 150,171 votes, Johnston, 41-year-old attorney, World War veteran and former textile worker who promised 100 per cent co-operation with President Roosevelt, had 123,370.

"Victory for Democracy."

In the Governor's race, Burnet R. Maybank, mayor of Charleston and an announced supporter of the National Administration, forged ahead of seven other candidates, with Wyndham M. Manning, of Sumter, and Cole L. Blease, former Governor and former United States Senator, running neck and neck for second place.

Senator Smith said tonight the voting was "a victory for true democracy."

"The only thing I wish to say," said Smith, "is that I congratulate the people of South Carolina for the victory for true democracy. It was through them that it was won."

Johnston spokesmen said they had no comment at the time.

The New Deal was not an issue in the gubernatorial contest, as none of the candidates made a point of opposing the Roosevelt Administration.

Blease Running Third.

Returns from 1,339 precincts gave Maybank 86,778 votes, Manning, 61,246, and Blease, 52,621. The other candidates stood: Neville Bennett, of Bennettsville, 38,586; Ben E. Adams, of Columbia, 21,303; D. T. Blackmon, Columbia, 2,733; John Hughes Cooper, Columbia, 923; F. M. Easterlin, Spartanburg, 6,181.

All parts of the State were represented in the Senatorial count, but reports from the heavy voting industralized cities of the Piedmont were proportionately scantier because of the large number of ballots cast and the fact that in the principal cities the polls remained open until 6 p. m., whereas in the remainder of the State 4 p. m. was closing time.

Expect Urban Votes.

Johnston's supporters banked upon this area to give him the votes to overcome Smith's acknowledged popularity in the farming regions. In Spartanburg, the Governor's home county, however, the 74-year-old Smith was less than 800 votes behind when 50 of 99 boxes were

Miss Perkins Refuses Request Of Rep. Dies to Deport Bridges

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Perkins, sharply criticizing the House Committee on un-American activities, refused last night a demand of Chairman Dies (Democrat), Texas, that the Department proceed at once with deportation proceedings against Harry Bridges, West Coast labor leader.

She wrote Dies that he as a member of Congress was attempting to "usurp" the functions of an executive department and that his understanding of several factors in the case was incorrect.

"Perhaps it is fortunate," she wrote, "that Shirley Temple was born an American citizen and that we will not have to debate the issue raised by the preposterous revelations of your committee in regard to this innocent and likeable child."

The committee had received testimony that Shirley Temple, with other motion picture stars, had become a "stooge" for Communist propaganda.

Miss Perkins disputed with Dies the meaning of several court decisions bearing upon the Bridges case. She asserted Dies had asked her to "overrule the legal advisors provided me by law," and proceed with the case despite the knowledge that a conflict of lower Federal court decisions, in which the case

Sheppard Calls Tenn. Report Unsatisfactory

Campaign Fund Inquiry Told Hopkins 'Beclouds Issue' of WPA Aid.

Chairman Sheppard, of the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee, yesterday expressed dissatisfaction with a report breaking down campaign spending of the successful "coalition" Democratic ticket in Tennessee.

Meanwhile the defeated Tennessee senatorial candidate for renomination, Senator Berry, charged Works Progress Administrator Hopkins was trying to "becloud the issue" of alleged WPA opposition to Berry in the Tennessee campaign.

Berry, who previously had accused the WPA of "gutter politics," struck back at Hopkins' reply that the Senator first had sought control of WPA in Tennessee for himself, "bag and baggage." Yesterday Berry wrote the committee, "Mr. Hopkins knows this is untrue in every A. B. C. detail."

Sheppard yesterday discussed with reporters a report received by the committee from John W. Harton, campaign manager of the successful "coalition" ticket, including the Tennessee Senatorial nominee, A. T. Stewart; the gubernatorial nominee, Prentice Cooper, and W. D. Hudson, running for public utility commissioner.

To Consult Committee.

The three candidates had pooled finances in a single campaign fund and the Senate committee had demanded a break-down for each of the candidates. Sheppard said the break-down submittd by Harton was "unsatisfactory" to him, but he will ask the opinion of his full committee.

Receipts of $18,376 and expenditures of $18,203 were reported by Harton for all three of the candidates. Tennessee's election laws limit candidates for governor and Senator each to $10,000, and candidates for public utility commissioner to $3,000.

Harton said Stewart had received $4,496, Cooper, $4,800 and Hudson, $2,300, in addition to $6,780 in contributions to their combined fund. He told the committee he had apportioned their expenditures as follows: For Stewart and Cooper, $7,914 each; and for Hudson, $2,374.

Seeks Pa., Ill. Breakdowns.

Sheppard said in his opinion such an arbitrary apportion might not reflect the amounts actually spent for each candidate. He said he was not intimating there had been any effort to cover illegal expenditures, but said that would be possible under such a method.

Combined contributions also were made in the Pennsylvania and Illinois campaigns and the committee is seeking a break-down of these also.

Berry in his second letter to the committee repeated his former charge that Harry S. Berry, (no relation), WPA administrator for Tennessee, and Rhoton Clift, the State administrator's assistant, had actively opposed him in his campaign.

5 Vacancies in Key House Posts Are Threat to Roosevelt Control

By Robert C. Albright.

While the Administration has been concentrating on a House Rules Committee purge, and elimination of hostile Democratic Senators, the all-important House Ways and Means committee already has lost five Democratic stalwarts, a check-up showed yesterday.

Control of that committee, which frames Government tax policies and sits as a "committee on committees" to select members of other House bodies, actually will be at stake when the House Democratic caucus at the start of next session fills the Ways and Means vacancies.

House Democratic leaders, who hitherto have remained aloof from purely sectional assignments to this pivotal committee, may be expected for the first time to attempt to step into the picture and influence the choice of new members.

Ways and Means Committee losses, which threaten New Deal control, have resulted from outright defeat in primary contests, Presidential appointments to other offices and desertions of New Dealers seeking the Senatorial toga.

With its present personnel, the committee already has been closely divided on some of the more extreme Administration tax proposals, notably on the so-called "third basket" tax, which was defeated by the House. Although 12 of the present members have virtually a 100 per cent New Deal voting record, six of the Democrats have voted against at least two Administration measures in the House, and the remaining seven members are Republicans. Unless at least three of the five Democratic vacancies are filled by thoroughgoing New Dealers, the committee in the future may have a distinctly conservative tinge.

Following are the five Democrats who will not again answer "aye" when the committee roll is called:

Representative Sanders, a 100 per center, defeated for renomination in the Texas Democratic primaries.

Representative Lewis, who is fighting it out in Maryland with Roosevelt support for the Senate seat of Senator Tydings.

Representative Wearin, of Iowa, who forsook his House seat in an unsuccessful effort to defeat Senator Gillette, in the Administration's first reputed purge attempt.

Representative Fuller, of Arkansas, conservative in his views but who supported the President on tax matters—defeated for renomination.

Former Representative Vinson, of Kentucky, the New Deal's No. 1 tax man in the House, who accepted the President's appointment to the United States Court of Appeals.

In addition to the five Democratic losses, one Republican will go off the committee—Representative Thurston, of Iowa, who unsuccessfully opposed former Senator Dickinson in Iowa's Republican primaries. A New Deal critic, Thurston sometimes voted for Administration measures.

Ways and Means membership usually is determined by geographic representation, each section generally putting up one or more candidates to fill vacancies allotted to it. In the past, House leaders have not sought to influence selections, but with control not only of Ways and Means but other committees at issue, this time they may claim a voice in the matter.

Taxation, on which the Ways and Means Committee has first say and vast power, and on which President Roosevelt received his one serious reverse in the last term, will be a dominant issue in the Seventy-sixth Congress as the Administration launches its new search for revenue.

Other House and Senate committees which figure largely in the Administration's present elimination campaign include the House Rules Committee, the Senate Finance Committee, the Senate Agriculture Committee and the Senate Privileges and Elections Committee.

New Dealers have met with one success and one failure in their fight for control of the House Rules Committee, with Representative Driver, of Arkansas, defeated, and Representative Smith, of Virginia, returned. Chief stake in the attempted purge of Representative O'Connor, of New York, is his removal as Rules chairman and succession to that office of a New Dealer, Representative Sabath, of Illinois.

Senator George, of Georgia, as chairman of the Senate Privileges and Elections Committee, will be in a position if returned to scrutinize closely the Campaign Expenditures committee's report on alleged WPA activity in behalf of the primary campaigns of Senator Barkley, of Kentucky, and Tennessee's New Deal senatorial nominee, Tom Stewart.

Pact in Harlan Draws Praise Of Roosevelt

President Lauds Record of Labor Board; Parries Queries on Act.

President Roosevelt last night gave hearty praise to the final peaceful settlement of the years of industrial strife that gave "Bloody Harlan" County, Ky., its name.

After a specific indorsement of the National Labor Relation Board's July record, the President disclosed that he would make public Friday morning the unanimous report of his commission which studied relations between British employers and employes.

A further report on Swedish labor relations will be made at a later date by the same commission, the President indicated.

Not Sure on Changes.

He said he did not know at this time whether he would make recommendations for any changes in the national labor relations act at the next Congress. He referred to the Friday report by the study commission when asked for his viewpoint on Wagner act changes.

Asked about the agreement between John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers and the coal operators of Harlan County he said that if it brought peace and decent working conditions to the miners of Harlan it was good. He added that he had first-hand knowledge of conditions there.

The President said the English report was very interesting. It is 42 pages long and was drafted after several weeks of intensive investigtaion by representatives of employers, the public and the American Federation of Labor.

No representatives of the Committee for Industrial Organization were taken along, as Chairman Lewis flatly refused to have anything to do with the inquiry, fearful of its use to bring about changes in the Wagner act which Lewis and the C. I. O. recently pledged to defend against any revision.

Lewis Sticks to Boycott.

Lewis stuck to his boycott of the investigation even after the President had denied personally that it would have anything to do with possible revision of the law, long criticized by businessmen as one-sided.

The President opened his press conference with a citation of the NLRB's July statistics, which showed that the board had swiftly settled 10 out of 16 strikes involving 3,849 workers. The six unsettled strikes involve less than 400 workers, he said.

He remarked sarcastically that this was not news, that it was only news when the man bites the dog. He added that the Labor Board does not get publicity concerning its daily conciliations of far-flung disputes.

Charge of 'Un-American' Talk In TVA Brings Official Defense

'We Impose No Restrictions on Freedom of Speech,' Personnel Director Replies to Congressional Question.

By the Associated Press.

Knoxville, Tenn., Aug. 30.—TVA's 33-year-old personnel director, Gordon Clapp, today told a Congressional investigating committee the Authority upholds the principle of free speech in reply to an assertion by Representative Wolverton (Republican), New Jersey, that he had heard of "un-American" talk at TVA adult education meetings.

Representative Jenkins (Republican), Ohio, added that operation of schools by TVA rather than by local school authorities, seemed "socialistic." But Clapp [illegible] schools were conforming to county and State regulations. TVA's ultimate objective was to merge them with local public school systems, Clapp said.

Wolverton said an informant had told him of attending a large meeting, part of the adult education activities, at which he listened to some of "the most un-American talk he had ever heard." Wolverton declined to name his informant, but offerd to put him on the witness stand later if the counsel desired.

Clapp asserted "we attempt to impose no restrictions as to freedom of speech. There may be some difference of opinion as to what constitutes 'un-American' activities."

Referring to previous testimony on TVA treatment of colored people, Francis Biddle, committee counsel, referred to a study made by Robert C. Weaver, of the Department of Interior, in 1935, censuring the Authority "for absolute lack of a program for Negro participation."

Clapp pointed out 11 per cent of TVA employes are colored, compared with a 10 per cent colored population in this area. In reply to questions as to why the percentage was lower in administrative jobs, he said:

"The Authority in general does not feel that it has any special responsibility to revise or reconstruct the traditional attitude of this area or any other area" on racial matters.

Navy Will Ask $200,000,000 For New Ships

Leahy Says Building Plans Will Make the Fleet 'Homogeneous.'

When the present Naval building program is completed the "United States will have for the first time a homogeneous fleet, well balanced and equipped with modern weapons and machinery," Admiral William D. Leahy, Chief of Naval Operations, revealed yesterday.

"It should be adequate," the Navy's ranking officer said in an article in the seventh-fifth Anniversary Edition of the Army and Navy Journal, "to protect America against serious attack by the naval force now in process of completion or at present contemplated by any foreign nation; and manned by courageous, skilled, and loyal personnel it should be the greatest insurance of peace our country can have."

Meanwhile, after a conference at the White House, the Admiral declared the Navy intends to ask Congress for $200,000,000 for additional shipbuilding.

The funds, he stated, will be spent as part of next year's construction program which includes two battleships, four cruisers, eight destroyers, and six or eight submarines.

Half Billion This Year.

The regular naval appropriation for the present year was $546,866,494, exclusive of a $16,000,000 deficiency appropritaion and about $50,000,000 of public works money used for shore establishments. The $200,000,000 presumably would be in addition to the regular appropriation, not counting special items.

Leahy said the increase was needed almost entirely to carry forward the billion-dollar fleet expansion program which was approved at the last session of Congress. Second year costs of building warships are always greater than initial outlays, he explained.

Whether the projected new battleships will be of the 45,000-ton maximum authorized in the fleet-expansion measure will be decided by Mr. Roosevelt, Leahy declared, adding that the four battleships carried in this year's program will be of 35,000 tons.

Training Rigorous.

In his Army and Navy Journal article, the admiral, speaking of the efficiency of the fleet, remarked that "In an effort to attain that perfection which assures victory in battle our fleet today carries out a most rigorous training schedule year in and year out. It was drill at the guns under Truxton and Preble which laid the foundation for the battle efficiency of our frigates and made possible the capture of many of the battle flags which line the walls of Mahan Hall at the Naval Academy and the Navy's training today is so planned and executed that when it becomes necessary every gun, torpedo and bomb can be used to its maximum effect."

Writing in the same publication, Secretary of the Navy Swanson stated that the total composition of the Navy, as authorized by present legislation, will be 18 capital ships of a total tonnage of 630,000 tons; 8 aircraft carriers totaling 165,000 tons, 28 light cruisers totaling 232,525 tons, 18 heavy cruisers totaling 180,000 tons, 144 destroyers totaling 28,000 tons and 56 submarines totaling 81,956 tons. In all there will be 272 combatant vessels of about 1,517,480 tons.

Roads Commission Asked for Return Of Grade Crossings

Baltimore, Aug. 30 (AP).—Ghosts of eliminated grade crossings arose today to haunt the State roads commission.

Chairman J. Glenn Beall said the roads unit had run up against a new problem in the shape of requests from Kensington and Rockville citizens for the reopening of grade crossings the commission has replaced with overpass construction.

The commission went to Kensington today for a conference, after the town Businessmen's Association wrote that barricades blocking the old grade crossing on St. Paul street there split the town in two, caused "incalculable damage" to business interests and "untold inconvenience" to citizens.

At Rockville, citizens have asked the commission to reopen the grade crossing on which 14 school children lost their lives in 1935 when a train hit their school bus.

Loyalists Smash On in Southwest, Cut Railway Anew

Hendaye, France (at Spanish frontier), Aug. 30 (U.P.).—Spanish Loyalist troops tonight pressed forward in their Estremadura offensive in southwest Spain, occupying new positions and cutting the Badajoz-Madrid Railroad at a second point, a government communique said.

The Loyalists, attacking in the Sierra Benquerencia, cut the railway between Castuera and Almorchon, 10 miles east of Castuera, further hemming in three isolated insurgent divisions in the rocky valley of the Zujar River, the communique reported.

Insurgent pilots, however, said Loyalist lines were broken, showing signs of a heavy defeat following a series of unsuccessful attacks.

The communique likewise said that loyalist troops reconquered positions near Robledo de la Maza in the Puente del Arzobispo zone north of the Zujar River front.

O'Connor Foe Faces Fight to Stay on Ballot

5,000 of 5,600 Names on Primary Petition for Fay Held Invalid.

New York, Aug. 30.—Supreme Court Justice Lloyd Church today ordered James H. Fay, avowed 100 per cent New Dealer, to show cause Friday why his name should not be stricken from the ballot in the Democratic primary in the Sixteenth Congressional District, where he is opposing Representative O'Connor, chairman of the House Rules Committee, who is on President Roosevelt's "purge" list.

Justice Church signed the order on the application of Henry Clauson, who charged that Fay's Democratic petitions were invalid because some signatures were forged, others improperly authenticated and more were of persons either non-existent or with incorrect addresses, and on 21 other grounds.

Clauson, a resident of the Twelfth Assembly District, heart of O'Connor's congressional areas, swore that of 5,600 names signed to Fay's Democratic petitions, 5,000 were invalid.

Clauson and his lawyer were accompanied by John T. Dooling, chairman of the Tammany law committee, which is supporting the contention of O'Connor adherents that the Fay Democratic petitions are invalid.

(At Washington President Roosevelt said he had no plans to speak in O'Connor's district.—Editor's Note.)

Wise Wins a Point On Reinstatement

Policeman Luther Wise, on trial yesterday before a Police Trial Board in connection with an extortion charge of which he was acquitted in District Court several months ago, won the first round of his fight for reinstatement to the force when the board granted a motion for a new bill of particulars.

Wise demanded the new bill after his counsel's motion for dismissal of the charges, which he contended were not specific, was denied. The case was continued by the board until Assistant Corporation Counsel M. J. Keane might prepare a new bill.

The Federal Diary

Res. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

The best show the Nation could have would be the result of an attempt by the Administration to purge Senator Carter Glass.

Also, it would be a healthy, wholesome thing for the native tongue; because the Senator would surely unloose such a flow of finely chosen words, all linked in such moving phrases as to give the polities-reading American some notion of the real powers and bite of a classic vituperation.

Also, we suspect, it would demonstrate that nothing this side of the heaven he so adores can purge Carter Glass. For if Dan'l Webster could best the devil and send him surrendered from the New Englander's back lot, Carter Glass could swim through the castor oils of Administration displeasure like a duck. He's that sort of man, they say in Virginia.

He has what it takes to make them like him down there, and regardless of whether some of them like his political notions. For one thing, he talks in the old way, and for another thing, he takes nothing from any man. Look, they will tell you, at how quick he jumped down Secretary Ickes' throat the other day.

And that's what brings the memory. Carter Glass can, of occasion, be as full of surprise as punch. They like him for that quality, too. And so they go to hear all his speeches—even when, far in advance, he tells the newspapers to pay no heed, because he won't have anything to say. The newspapers have learned to pay no attention to him in that particular regard. A steaming day in 1936 taught them that well-remembered lesson.

Citizens of Hanover County, Va., were celebrating with an elaborate pageant a milestone anniversary of Patrick Henry, the county's native son. The Congress had appropriated $10,000 to help swing the show, and they had on the lot a Virginian who had starred in one of the productions of "Tobacco Road." Thousands of people congregated there and held a tournament for plumed knights. Historic homes were opened to the public—the present day dissolved from sight, except where vistas inclined the eyes to highways where 1936 motor cars passed endlessly.

On a key day of the week-long celebration they brought in Carter Glass. He told the Richmond papers to pay no attention to his visit; he was merely to greet the people and wish the pageant well. So when the Senator mounted the rostrum, in the shade of giant elms, no reporters were in the throng that packed the lawn. One reporter happened to pass and, having nothing on tap at the moment, walked over to hear the Senator exchange his pleasantries. The reporter had no paper or pencil for the Senator had announced no formal speech.

There he stood on the porch, his shoulders just topping the tall table before him. His mouth was drawn to one side, elastically. "I feel all the emotions of pride . . ." he was saying. The heads of the vast throng shifted back and forth, like a palm leaf fan in the heat. And then, of a terrible sudden, the Senator's mouth swung more elastically and the words, hard-chewed, deeply bitter leaped:

"If Patrick Henry were living, would he try to cure one evil with a multiude of other evils . . . I wish Patrick Henry were living today; I wonder what he would think of the whims and vagaries in Government; if he were living, would he be bamboozled by talk of public aid." He jumped on Congress for delegating its powers to the Chief Executive and to public officials; he called on the memory of Patrick Henry "whose whole career was epitomized by Thomas Jefferson," when said the Sage of Monticello "that at the altar of God he had sworn eternal hostility to every form of tyranny over the mind of man."

* * * *

In that year, no one had been saying much against the Administration, and farmers were feeling the glows from Government checks. To say that the audience reacted enthusiastically would strain the truth. (And to say the papers scrambled that night is something else, also.) The point is that nobody, as far as we could determine, got sore with the Senator. Some grumbled, saying they didn't agree with him, but they liked him just the same. And many of them who disagreed, would have fought any man who too harshly took the Senator to task.

There is a puzzle which we won't think even the Senator himself can explain, the puzzle of how he rips and snorts and speaks his mind, but makes them love him, all the same. And that's what would make so interesting an Administration attempt to give the Senator a dose of purging oil. The very devil and Dan'l Webster wouldn't have known the like of it!

British Hold Up Pledge to Back Czechs in War

maining within reach of London."

Elsewhere it was learned the cabinet decided against making any commitments beyond the terms of Sir John Simon's warning speech at Lanark on Saturday which echoed Chamberlain's declaration in Parliament on March 24 This refused to commit Britain to action in the event of war over Czechoslovakia, although it warned that if war broke out it might not be limited to those nations which had assumed legal obligations.

British diplomacy in Berlin is to be directed toward a fresh attempt to enlist Hitler's co-operation for the success of Viscount Runciman's mission of mediation in Prague. Sir Nevile, it is forecast, will try "an entirely new approach" to the German government. The ambassador's new approach will derive greater authority from his actual presence at the cabinet meeting at which British policy was decided—the ambassador's presence in the cabinet room was a rare distinction.

It is hinted the new approach will begin with the conveyance to Hitler of the personal views of Chamberlain. These personal views are confidential, but Chamberlain is known to hold the view that the question of war or peace in Europe rests with Hitler and that upon his head lies the responsibility for leading Europe to chaos or peace. Doubtlessly, Hitler will be tactfully reminded of his responsibilities and his power for good or evil.

Warns of Bad Effect.

In addition to his personal message from the prime minister to the Reichsfuehrer, the British Ambassador has instructions to advise Hitler of the bad effect that would be created if Sudeten Germans refused to examine the new Czech compromise in a spirit of conciliation.

Government spokesmen refused to confirm reports a joint Anglo-French demarche was to be made in Berlin. However, if the situation should get worse instead of improving, Sir Nevile, who returns to Berlin tomorrow, is fully authorized to repeat in stronger terms the warnings heretofore uttered by Chamberlain and Simon.

Something in the nature of a united front of Britain, France and the United States will be exhibited when the ambassadors of those three nations to Germany attend the Nazi party congress at Nuremburg next week. The presence of the American Ambassador was especially desired as neither the French nor the British envoys cared to attend alone and take the brunt of the expected verbal assault on the Democratic nations.

The French Ambassador to London, Charles Corbin, will return here tomorrow from his vacation and is to see Lord Halifax, the foreign secretary. The American Ambassador also has arranged to see Halifax.

Today's cabinet examined with approval the compromise proposals which Lord Runciman, the British mediator in Prague, inspired and on which the Czechs are ready to begin negotiations with Konrad Henlein's Sudeten German Party when and if Henlein gets a signal from Hitler to proceed along the path of a conciliation.

This latest compromise to avert war calls for the reorganization of Czechoslovakia along the lines of the Swiss cantonal system. The country would be divided into a score of cantons or departments, each having local administrators independence. The central government at Prague would reserve control of the defense forces and also would take steps to prevent persecution of Jews in districts where the Sudeten Germans would come into power.

Represents Concession.

Adoption of this scheme by Prague represents a substantial concession beyond its previous offer of home rule for the historic provinces incorporated in the post-war state of Czechoslovakia. The scheme, however, falls short of the "minimum demand" of the Henleinists for complete territorial autonomy for Bohemia. Neither does it meet Henlein's demand that Prague abandon her Russian and French alliances.

In the opinion of Downing street, Prague is offering genuine concessions which if received by the Sudetens in a reasonably conciliatory spirit should lead to a peaceful settlement in central Europe. Their rejection would, of course, aggravate an already delicate situation.

There is a disposition among diplomats in London to hold their breaths and cross their fingers until Chancellor Hitler speaks at the Nuremburg Congress next Tuesday. The situation would indeed be critical if Hitler rejected anything short of territorial autonomy and called for a plebiscite among the Sudeten Germans as to whether they desire annexation of their Bohemia to the Reich.

After Hitler invaded Austria he sanctioned his conquest with a plebiscite. In the present case, some think a plebiscite may precede any goosestepping across the frontier. The procedure might be for the Sudetens to proclaim their independence from Prague and to schedule a plebiscite to ratify union with Germany. If Prague, to prevent secession, used force to quell the revolt, there would be all the elements of a civil war. In that case, Hitler might rush the German army and air force to the rescue of the Sudetens.

Probably Hitler would proclaim that he was not invading but merely intervening to put down bloodshed. The subtle distinction between invasion and intervention would be invoked to dissuade mobolization by Czechoslovakia's allies.

A warning to Germany that Britain can count on the backing of the United States in any war was sounded by an influential member of Parliament, Robert Boothby, writing in the London Daily Telegraph.

"The Germans have frequently maintained that if only they had known beforehand precisely what the action of the British government in 1914 was going to be, the last war might have been averted," Boothby writes. And he adds: "It was not possible for them to know that and it is not possible today, but it is right that they should know the risks run if they choose the method of military action instead of conciliation.

"The risk is nothing less than that they will be involved in armed conflict with Russia, with France and with the British empire, supported by the imponderable but overwhelming moral and material strength of the United States.

"If the Nazi leaders are counting on French and British inaction, in the face of German aggression against Czechoslovakia, they are making a terrible miscalculation which must be corrected before it is too late."

Echoing the thought in many minds over here, Boothby says: "We have now entered upon the most critical phase of international politics since the war and the fate of Europe and the world for a generation to come may well be decided during the next ten days."

Fears by European capitalists, speculators and hoarders as to the outcome of the Czech-German quarrel, resulted in a rush to buy American dollars and sell English pounds sterling in London's foreign exchange today.

For the first time in over three years the dollar "looked the pound in the face." The frantic bidding shot the dollar sterling rate down to 4.85⅞ dollars to each pound, which is well below the old parity rate of $4.86 2-3 which prevailed before Britain deserted the gold standard in 1931. The last time that the dollar was over parity was in May, 1935. Owing to the sterling fall, gold bars reached their highest price since May 11, 1935.

The buying of American dollars and gold bullion and selling of sterling was attributed to the fact New York is 3,000 miles farther removed from Prague than is London and to that extent should be safe from involvement in any continental war.

The weakness of the Swiss franc was another feature of today's exchange market. This weakness was linked to the fact Hitler yesterday inspected the German fortifications along his frontiers with Switzerland and France and that French army maneuvers are opening on the Swiss frontier.

What Corbett Liked About Hines

Jimmy Hines, shown at the Democratic convention in Philadelphia in 1935 doing a bit of political spadework, is dressed as he was when Eddie Corbett, boxer, admired his "built," according to Corbett's testimony at the Hines trial. Corbett told of Hines' visits to the late Dutch Schultz in Connecticut.

Ex-Tammany Leader Charges Hines Asked Police Transfers

annoying the racket they would be shifted. When it came, the shift involved a pay cut of $240 a year.

This chain of circumstantial evidence, linking Hines to the racket, was forged by District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey only after a long struggle with the defense over the admission of the police testimony.

Curry's testimony followed up the charge of the prosecution that Hines and the Schultz mob together obtained the nomination of William C. Dodge as successful Tammany candidate for district attorney in 1933, with Hines declaring Dodge would be useful because "stupid, respectable, and 'his' man."

Curry testified that Hines, prior to the 1933 campaign, proposed to him the name of Dodge as his choice for district attorney. Hines, he said, mentioned no other name either for that or any other office. Curry said the group within Tammany Hall at that time controlled by Hines constituted the largest block of votes in the New York County Democratic Committee. He acceded to Hines' proposal of Dodge's candidacy, he said, and named Henry Sobel as Dodge campaign manager.

The struggle over the admission of the evidence of the policemen caused most of this morning's hearing to be a discussion among Supreme Court Justice Pecora, Dewey and Lloyd Paul Stryker, with associate defense counsel. The discussion was held at the jurist's bench, inaudible to the press or crowd in the courtroom, and the transcript of it, supplied to the press, was censored.

When Justice Pecora finally ruled, in the afternoon, that the police might testify, he said he did so only because he believed that in the proving of so difficult a thing as conspiracy the prosecution should receive due leeway, and because he realized that the police records of policemen's transfers would be unlikely to contain the real reasons for them. Stryker took exception to Justice Pecora's ruling admitting the testimony.

Counsel for the defense contended the policemen's testimony that they were shifted after interfering with the policy racket would be based on inference, rather than on a foundation of legal evidence, yet be highly prejudicial to Hines.

James S. Dolan, police commissioner on October 10, 1933, when the transfers of Sergt. Gray, Detective Canavan, and Patrolman Stilley were ordered, was apprised of the testimony of Curry and Bennett. He declined to comment.

Dewey added the testimony of a fourth patrolman, Edward J. McCarthy, to his story of policemen being "broken" after incurring the wrath of the Schultz mob. But Curry's surprising appearance on the stand proved the sensation of the day, and so great was its effect that defense counsel asked an adjournment until this morning before they start to cross-examine the former Tammany chieftian.

chairman, praised his "unfailing energy and courtesy" and declared he had "made a unique contribution to the task of placing the social security program on a sound administrative basis."

Will Work With States.

He added:

"The board's regret at losing Mr. Bane's services is partly offset by the fact that, in his new undertaking, he will be working with State governments which, of course, play a large role in the administration of the social security act."

Bane, in his letter of resignation, pointed out that organization period in the board was largely over.

"During this period," he said, "an organization has been created to administer the social security act. All the States have established public assistance and unemployment compensation programs, which are now in operation, and old-age insurance is functioning on a national scale, to the continuing benefit of about 40,000,000 workers."

Bane resigned as director of the American Public Welfare Association to become executive director of the board shortly after the enactment of the social security act. In 1933, while still with the association, he became general consultant for the Federal Emergency Relief Administration.

Appointed by Hoover.

Former President Hoover, in 1930, named him a member of the Emergency Committee for Unemployment appointed to study this problem.

Bane is a brother of Baldwin S. Bane, director of the Registration Division of the Securities and Exchange Commission. He was born in Smithfield, Va., and is 45 years old. He was educated at Randolph-Macon Academy and at Columbia University.

He entered the public welfare field in 1920 as secretary of the Virginia State Board of Charities and Correction. In 1923 he became director of public welfare at Knoxville, Tenn., leaving in 1926 to accept the position of professor of sociology at the University of Virginia. In 1928 he was named commissioner of public welfare of Virginia.

Nun 100 Searched For 2 Days Found In Convent's Attic

Sister Mary Bernadette, of the Convent of the Visitation at Alta Vista, Md., cowered for 48 hours in the convent attic while 100 CCC boys searched nearby woods for her, it was discovered yesterday.

The partially blind nun was found in a corner of the third floor storeroom by other sisters and taken immediately to Georgetown Hospital, to be treated for lack of nourishment and shock. She was too weak to talk coherently of her experience, convent authorities said.

It is believed she went into hiding through fear of being taken from the convent because of an imagined mental illness.

Attic dust on her black habit convinced Sergt. James S. McAuliffe, who directed the two-day search, that Sister Mary had remained in her third floor hiding place during the entire period. He said he had suggested repeatedly that his men be allowed to search the building, but was told the sisters already had done so.

was involved, remained to be resolved by the Supreme Court.

Before the Bridges hearings, Miss Perkins said the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals decided in the case of Strecker vs. Kessler "that membership in the Communist Party is not ground for deportation." The case against Bridges was based upon an allegation that he was a Communist Party member.

Up to Supreme Court.

"This department," Miss Perkins wrote, "has recommended that this decision be appealed to the Supreme Court since it was recognized at once . . . that unless this holding were reversed by the highest court that the charges brought against Bridges, even if proved, had no legal significance, whatsoever. . . .

"Summarized briefly, your advice seems to be that I should have ignored the most recent holdings of the courts, overruled the legal advisors provided me by law and have ordered the service to proceed with the Bridges case in the face of my knowledge that even if the evidence at the hearing should sustain the charges, deportation itself could not be effected until the conflict of decisions among the circuit courts had been ultimately resolved by the highest tribunal."

Chairman Dies, who said he spoke for a majority of the committee, wrote Miss Perkins the Immigration Service's file disclosed evidence Bridges was a member of the Communist Party and that the party advocates overthrow of the United States Government by force and violence. The proceedings should be pressed, he said, before important witnesses get out of reach.

The House Committee secured the Immigration Service's file on the Bridges case after Edward Sullivan, a committee investigator, reported Bridges had received "aid and advice" from the Labor Department while patriotic organizations were trying to have him deported for communistic activities.

Hearing Before January.

Los Angeles, Aug. 30 (AP).—A hearing will be held on the question of whether Harry Bridges, Western C. I. O. director, is deportable, regardless of a pending United States Supreme Court case involving similar issues, immigration Commissioner James Houghteling said today. Such a hearing, he said, probably would be conducted in San Francisco "before January."

brief speech—the President will board the yacht Potomac and sail down to Chesapeake Bay. His guests will include Lewis and Goldsborough.

The next day the President and his guests will disembark at Crisfield and then motor to Denton, Goldsborough's home town, where the President will make his Labor Day speech. The speech, it was announced yesterday, will be broadcast over the red and blue networks of the National Broadcasting Co., from 2 to 2:30 p. m.

Goldsborough, who visited the White House yesterday, said the President would stop briefly at Salisbury, largest town on the Eastern Shore, and probably say a few words. He will have luncheon at Goldsborough's home in Denton and will speak from in front of the Law Building facing the courthouse.

"Not Ashamed" of Ad.

Endicott Rich, publicity director for the Tydings campaign, announced the text of tomorrow's advertisement as follows:

"Citizens of Maryland . . .

"Defend your State against Federal invasion.

"Your declaration of rights adopted by your forefathers in 1776—the foundation and bulwark of your constitution—declares:

"'Article 4. That the people of this State have the sole and exclusive rgiht of regulating the internal government . . . as a free, sovereign and independent State.

"'Article 7. That . . . elections ought to be free . . .

"'Article 8. That the legislative, executive and judicial powers of government ought to be forever separate and distinct from each other; and no person exercising the function of one of said departments shall assume or discharge the duties of any other.

"Your constitutional rights are threatened by the Federal Administration supported by the C. I. O., John L. Lewis and Communists.

"Preserve your civil and religious liberties guaranteed to you under your bill of rights and State Constitution.

Vote for
Millard E. Tydings
for United States Senator.

"Primary day, September 12, falls this year on historic Defenders' Day. Defend your rights on Defenders' Day and keep the Free State free!"

Rich made public the text of the ad with the comment that "we are not ashamed of what we say." He added that he could not understand how a copy reached the White House since "none of the papers on the list could possibly publish until tomorrow."

Lewis Hits 'Invasion' Cry.

Representative Lewis, in a radio speech last night over WRC in this city and stations in Baltimore and Hagerstown, attacked those who are calling the President's visit an "invasion."

"For my part," said Lewis, "I know that the people of Maryland thoroughly disapprove of this campaign against the President's exercising his constitutional rights. The signs which greet the visitor entering our Free State will not read—as Tydings would have them—'Welcome to Maryland, to all citizens except the President of the United States.'"

Referring to Senator Tydings' charge that he had enlisted the aid of the "most powerful man in the world," Lewis said:

"The most powerful man in this country—I cannot speak for the world—is the man and woman with the vote. The voters put Franklin Roosevelt where he is; put him there to end the rule of Tory Republicans who had left behind them a trail of broken banks, of ruined family fortunes, of blasted hopes and opportunities in general.

"The Labor Day visit of the President in Maryland obviously is not in their plan. It does not fit. So, therefore, the President of the United States must be treated as a carpetbagger when he enters Maryland to speak as a Democrat leader in this primary election."

Tydings in Carroll County.

Senator Tydings last night visited two towns in Carroll County which are reported to be pro-Tydings territory. First he went to Smallwood and shook hands with a large number of the 500 farmers gathered there. He did not make a speech. One of his aides said a speech was not necessary.

From Smallwood he went to Westminster, where a firemen's carnival was in progress. Here he was joined by blonde, attractive Mrs. Tydings. He did not make a speech, but joined in the carnival fun, trying out his skill at the shooting gallery among other things.

A farmer came up to Tydings and said:

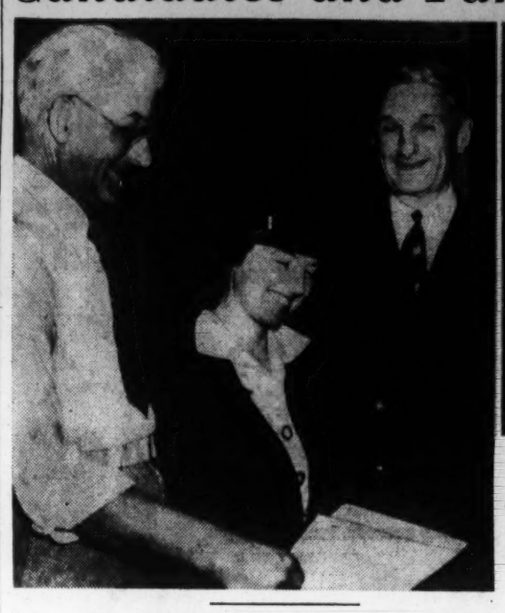
"Senator, I am a Republican and can't take part in the Democratic primary, but I am going to vote for you in November."

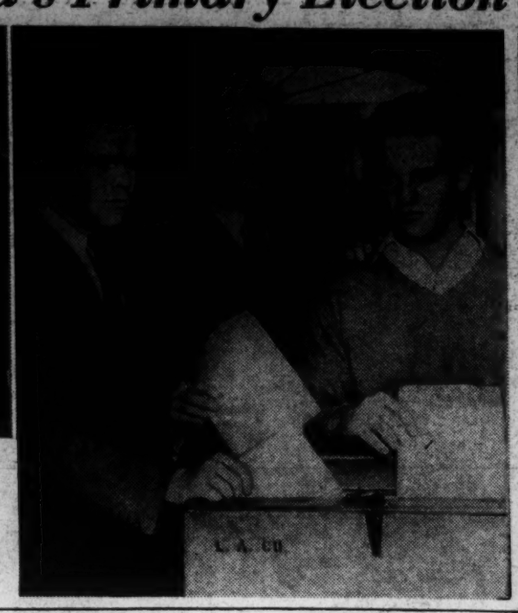
Arthur E. Hungerford, third Democratic candidate for Senator, said last night at Glen Echo his two opponents had been "lax" in obtaining Federal aid for development of the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal as a recreational area.

He said Senator Tydings and Representative Lewis had nothing to do with the projected Government purchase of the canal.

"The bills to make its rehabilitation possible were carried through Congress by Senators and Congressmen outside the State," Hungerford told an audience in the Glen Echo volunteer fire house.

Candidates and Families at Polls in California's Primary Election





Associated Press WIREPHOTOS.

At Atherton, Calif., the Downeys voted with their fingers crossed. Above photo made as Sheridan Downey, who opposed Senator W. G. McAdoo, took his family to the polls. From left—Margaret Downey, 26; Downey, Mrs. Downey and Sheridan, jr., 25. Downey backed California's $30-a-week pension plan, opposed by President Roosevelt. At left—Senator William G. McAdoo as he handed his ballot to A. H. Orgibet, precinct inspector at Los Angeles. Mrs. McAdoo accompanied the Senator. At right is Culbert L. Olson, also a candidate for the U. S. Senatorship from California on the Democratic ticket, as he watched his 21-year-old twin sons, John (left) and Dean (right), vote for the first time.

first win the nomination in the party of his registry or possible nomination by other parties cannot be credited to him.

Los Angeles County, nearly 2 to 1 Democratic and containing 42 per cent of the State's 3,454,058 voters, balloted so heavily during the morning that Registrar William M. Kerr predicted a 60 per cent turnout.

San Francisco and San Diego did even better. Secretary of State Frank C. Jordan said the final returns probably would amount to between 50 and 70 per cent of the voting power. Anything over 60 per cent indicates exceptional public interest.

Republicans Outnumbered.

The Democratic Party had a registration of 2,052,518. There were 1,246,773 Republicans qualified to vote.

President Roosevelt's repeated endorsement of the 74-year-old Senator McAdoo failed to draw a clear-cut New Deal issue because Sheridan Downey, powerful "liberal" candidate for the Democratic senatorial nomination, pledged allegiance to the Roosevelt program, and John W. Preston, the "no rubber stamp" contender, said he would support the President's "humanitarian" projects.

Only one Democratic senatorial contender, James W. Mellen, ran as an anti-New Dealer.

A $30-a-week pension issue and a strenuous attempt by several Democratic factions to unseat McAdoo, the Californian nearest to the White House, complicated that phase of the battle.

Preston and Mellen accused McAdoo of permitting a "shakedown" of Federal jobholders for campaign funds. The Senate Campaign Committee investigated and reported finding evidence that Government employes had contributed "voluntarily" but that there was no evidence of solicitation.

Downeyites circulated documents purporting to show McAdoo formerly was connected with the Ku Klux Klan. McAdoo denied it.

1,000,000 Back Pension.

Downey championed the pension plan, which would require the payment of $30 weekly in "stamp redemption" State warrants to every nonworking Californian over 50 years of age. McAdoo opposed it as "unsound" and as a threat to the present Federal-State pension system. President Roosevelt, who twice had proclaimed a desire to see McAdoo re-elected, disapproved the idea as "Utopian."

Despite widespread disapproval by economists and business interests, the pension plan forced its way into the primary picture when it reputedly gained 1,000,000 petition signers. It was not on today's ballot, however, and it still faced a legal hurdle to get on the ballot in November.

The pension warrants would circulate as money among all who would accept them but possessors would be required to stamp them each week with 2 per cent of their face value, using real money to buy the stamps. At the end of a year each $1 warrant would bear $1.04 worth of stamps and would be redeemed for $1 cash, out of the stamp fund, and removed from circulation.

Their effectiveness as currency during their year of life thus would depend upon the velocity of their turnover. Opponents argued they would pile up and lose their value when merchants refused to accept them.

Republican senatorial candidates, Ray L. Riley, a veteran State official, and Philip Bancroft, a militant farmer with many objections to the WPA and the relief system, kept out of the pension argument.

The $30 scheme crept into the Democratic race for Governor, however. Candidate Culbert L. Olson, former adherent of "EPIC" Democrat Upton Sinclair, indicated his willingness to give the plan a trial. Another contender, New Deal Representative John F. Dockweiler, indorsed it outright.

Candidate Daniel C. Murphy, A. F. L.-indorsed, and contenders J. P. O'Connor, former controller of the currency, and William H. Neblett, McAdoo's erstwhile law partner, opposed the pension idea.

Rounding out that contest were Herbert C. Legg, Los Angeles supervisor, and T. A. Tomasini, San Francisco engineer.

Republican Gov. Frank F. Merriam, promising governmental economy, and Lieut. Gov. George Hatfield, with a State "house cleaning" program, dominated the minority gubernatorial contest.

Seventeen of the 19 incumbent Congressmen, most of them New Dealers, sought renomination.

A small but strategically powerful third party, the Progressive, threatened trouble for both the Republicans and Democrats. Its gubernatorial candidate, Raymond L. Haight, sought also the Republican and Democratic nominations.

Candidate Olson sought to remove the Progressive threat by filing for the Progressive as well as the Democratic nomination. A large increase in Progressive registration followed this filing but whether Olson supporters had captured the party remained to be seen. An Olson victory there would eliminate Haight and leave a two-way race in November.

Tydings Recognized As His Own Booster

Westminster, Aug. 30.—Senator Tydings, a twice-decorated World War veteran, tested his eye at a shooting gallery here tonight during a firemen's carnival. Using a .22 rifle, he mowed down a row of ducks.

The woman in charge of the shooting gallery did not recognize the Senator, but commented on a Tydings campaign button on his lapel.

"I see you are for Tydings," she said.

"Yes," said the Senator, blushing, "I guess I am."

reported. He had 4,033 votes against 4,811 for Johnston.

In Greenville, the adjoining county and one of the world's largest textile manufacturing centers, Smith was leading 10,807 to 7,816 when 70 of 92 boxes were reported. Smith carried Laurens County, in the same area, 4,704 to 4,693, and in Anderson, where Johnston was born, he had 1,351 votes against 1,313 for the Governor in 20 of 65 boxes.

Two South Carolina Representatives had apparently safe leads for renomination, but two others were trailing their opponents. National issues did not figure prominently in any of the contests.

Incomplete returns showed Representatives McMillan, of the First, and Fulmer, of the Second, ahead of A. Russell McGowan and Andrew J. Bethea, respectively.

In the Third, Representative Taylor was second to Butler B. Hare, of Saluda, a former Representative, in a field of five, and a run-off primary between them was indicated. Date for the run-off is September 13.

G. Lloyd Ford, of Conway, and James L. McMillan, of Florence, headed six entries for the Sixth District post, vacated by death of Representative A. Gasque a few months ago, and seemed headed for a run-off.

Representative Richards in the Fifth District was renominated without opposition.

No votes had been reported for State Senator Edgar A. Brown, who withdrew from the race Saturday and threw his support to Smith after campaigning three months as an avowed New Dealer. His name remained on the tickets but election officials had instructions not to count any votes cast for him.

Smith was bitterly criticised throughout the three months campaign by Johnson and Brown until the latter withdrew. Both attacked him on the grounds that he had not supported important Administration measures.

He retorted that he had voted for more than 80 per cent of Administration measures and had opposed only those he believed wrong.

Long county tickets were expected to delay completion of the counting.

With eight candidates running, a second primary between the two high men was regarded as inevitable in the race for Governor. It will be held September 13.

They rejected the offer and ordered the painting rated for taxes at $10,000.

say, but if the President's appearance should tip the popular scales in Lewis' favor the result would be indicated in the institute's continuous survey.

The institute began its survey following President Roosevelt's sharp slap at Senator Tydings in a press conference a few days ago. Field crews have been assigned to cover the "Free State" from end to end, and the survey will be continued up to the eve of the actual voting.

Tydings on Purge List.

Senator Tydings has announced that he is "for the sinews of the New Deal," but political writers have long placed him on the list of conservatives the New Deal would like to "purge" in the primaries.

Victory for Tydings would be a blow for the New Deal wing of the party and would undoubtedly strengthen the conservatives in their plans for 1939 and 1940.

On the other hand, victory for Representative Lewis, who was one of the four co-sponsors of the social security act, would help to raise President Roosevelt's prestige in his own party and in the next Congress.

One imponderable in the race at present is the fact that about one voter in four has apparently not yet decided how he will vote.

Among those who do have opinions, the vote for the two candidates is:

Tydings	58%
Lewis	42

Another institute report on Maryland will be published in The Post before the election.

Next Sunday the institute reports preliminary results in a special survey of the Georgia primary, where conservative Senator Walter George is fighting for renomination against New Dealer Lawrence Camp and former Gov. Eugene Talmadge in the face of President Roosevelt's expressed opposition.

Roosevelt Vote-Getter.

By Edward T. Folliard

Twelve days before Maryland's Democratic primary election, Senator Millard E. Tydings is well ahead of his New Deal opponent, Representative David J. Lewis.

Everything points to this. If there is any doubt about it, that doubt is dissolved by Lewis' successful efforts to have President Roosevelt come into Maryland to help him.

Will Tydings win? That depends on how Maryland Democrats react to the President's "invasion," which has now become the paramount issue in the dramatic campaign. Barring bombshells which of themselves might affect the outcome, a Lewis victory would be a tribute to President Roosevelt—to his prestige, his golden voice, his personal charm. Literally it would be a Roosevelt victory. Conversely, a Tydings triumph would be a sharp rebuke to the President.

Among the Tydings strategists, there is a division of opinion as to the effect of Roosevelt's participation in this bitter "grudge fight."

"The more Roosevelt does the worse it will be—for Davey Lewis," some say.

"Listen," say the others, "Roosevelt is a vote-getter, the greatest vote-getter of all time."

Under Maryland's political system, Representative Lewis—or Senator Tydings—might win a majority of the popular vote and yet lose the nomination. That happened about a quarter of a century ago. The late Blair Lee, running for the Democratic nomination for Governor, won a majority of the popular vote, but lost the nomination to Arthur P. Gorman, jr. That requires a detailed explanatiotn.

The primary voters in a Baltimore election district or in a county actually vote for delegates or nominators to the Democratic party convention, September 12. These nominators are, of course, bound to vote in accordance with the majority vote of their particular areas, just as Presidential electors are bound in a national election.

Representation in the party convention is based on representation in the Maryland Legislature. Thus little St. Mary's County, which has two representatives in the House of Delegates and one in the Senate, will have three nominators at the convention. Larger, more heavily-populated Prince Georges County, which has six Delegates and one senator, will accordingly have seven in the convention.

The population of Maryland, according to the census of 1930, is 1,631,526. Almost half of this population is in Baltimore City, the remainder being in the 23 counties. The actual 1930 figures are: Baltimore, 804,874; counties, 826,652.

The counties, fearful of Baltimore domination, have managed to hold down Baltimore's representation in the Maryland Legislature. Necessarily, that uneven representation is reflected in the Democratic nominating convention.

There are 149 votes in the convention. Baltimore has only 42 of these, seven for each of the city's six election districts. The remaining 107 votes are divided among the counties.

Thus, Baltimore, which has almost 50 per cent of the population, has only about 28 per cent of the votes in the convention. A candidate could sweep all six Baltimore districts, capture all of its 42 votes, and still be far short of a majority of the convention votes, which is 75.

It is the immemorial custom of campaign managers to claim everything, concede nothing. That has been their policy in the Tydings-Lewis battle—at least, for publication. However, what they say when they take their hair down and discuss the reports from their workers in the field is more to the point.

Count on Shore Vote.

Here is what the Tydings campaign workers honestly think is Tydings territory as of today:

Three Baltimore City districts	21
Baltimore County	7
Anne Arundel County	7
Montgomery County	6
Harford County	5
Howard County	3
Carroll County	5
Charles County	3
Calvert County	3
St. Marys County	3
Total	63

That leaves Tydings 12 votes shy of the necessary 75 in the convention. The Tydings people all along have been assuming that he would carry the nine counties on Maryland's Eastern Shore, which have a total of 34 votes. Those Eastern Shore counties usually vote alike.

They began to have doubts about the Eastern Shore when Representative T. Alan Goldsborough, of Denton, although supposedly neutral, began working under cover for Lewis. Now that President Roosevelt, at the invitation of Lewis and Goldsborough, is going to make a Labor Day speech at Denton the whole Eastern Shore goes into the doubtful column.

Lewis Total Only 52.

The Tydings strategists see a way to victory if the Senator gets an even break on the Eastern Shore.

Here is what the Lewis camp thinks is definite Lewis territory, as of today:

Three Baltimore districts	21
Prince Georges County	7
Allegheny	7
Washington	7
Garrett	4
Frederick	6
Total	52

That leaves Lewis needing 23 votes to achieve the 75 needed to win. The Eastern Shore votes would put him over handily. However, some of what is put down as Lewis territory is perilously close—Frederick County, for example. On the other hand, the Lewis people think they have a good chance to pick up a fourth Baltimore district, and they are far from ready to concede Montgomery County to Tydings.

Thus, with both camps counting on Eastern Shore votes, the importance of President Roosevelt's visit next Monday to Denton for a Labor Day speech becomes apparent. Both Tydings and Lewis need those votes, but Lewis needs them more badly.

Cycle Officer Finds Alarm False, and Loses Mount

A burglar alarm at 1003 Pennsylvania avenue northwest went off last night for the second time in a month and sent a motorcycle policeman back to headquarters on foot, all for nothing.

Doctors' Hospital Wins Parking Site

Permission to construct a four-story parking center in the 1800 block of I street northwest, to accommodate patrons of the proposed $2,000,000 Doctors' Hospital, was granted yesterday by the District building inspector's office.

Dr. Charles Stanley White, president of the hospital, said the parking center would provide space for 350 automobiles. Construction will begin this week.

Dr. White said the project would cost about $225,000.

The Municipal Center Grant.

After many years of discussion and agitation the District's hopes for an adequate municipal center are now on the way to fulfillment. The PWA has approved an allotment of $5,700,000 and construction of the administrative building is to begin in the very near future.

Of this sum $3,135,000 will be in the form of a loan to the District bearing the interest charge of 4 per cent. The prospective cost to the local government can hardly be said to be excessive. Yet the additional burden—$126,400 a year for interest charges alone—will obviously make the already difficult task of balancing the District budget that much more difficult.

Yet there is good reason why the municipal center should be on a more pretentious scale than immediate local government needs would seem to require. The development of Federal buildings in the triangle and along Pennsylvania avenue makes it essential that the District buildings erected in that area harmonize with the general scheme and architecturally be in keeping with the improvement of Washington as the National Capital. And the outright Federal grant—45 per cent of the total—entitles the Government to dictate the architectural scheme.

It is to be hoped that in making their plans those in charge of the construction of the civic center avoid an error of omission so frequently made in the past. The area of which the municipal center will form a part promises to become congested. It will contain, in addition to the center, the Mellon Gallery, the municipal and juvenile courts, ground for which is soon to be broken, the new central library and other contemplated buildings. Unless foresight is used to provide adequate parking facilities in the area another major traffic problem will be created.

The removal of long-standing obstacles to the construction of the municipal center also raises the question of whether plans for the approved central library project should not be hastened. Thus construction of this needed edifice might get under way at approximately the same time as the other buildings and thus bring the whole projected development around Judiciary Square to something like simultaneous fulfillment.

Peace In Harlan.

The deserved difficulties which John L. Lewis and the C. I. O. are now encountering on various sections of the labor front make all the more striking the notable victory they have just won in Harlan County, Kentucky.

For all too many years Harlan has been dark and bloody ground, a shameful relic of industrial feudalism where violence begat violence in an endless vendetta. Passage of the labor relations act, which threw the Government's mantle of protection over labor's right to organize and exercise collective bargaining, brought no immediate change in the situation there. The investigations of the La Follette committee revealed innumerable instances of lawlessness directed against union organizers and led, finally, to an indictment of 69 mining companies, individual operators and law enforcement officials on the charge of conspiracy to violate the law.

The trial which followed led to no verdict. But now the operators have voluntarily come forward and signed a collective bargaining agreement with the United Mine Workers similar in every detail to those in existence in other coal-mining areas. "Bloody" Harlan promises to be bloody no more. The development is a cause for Nation-wide rejoicing, and both the mine operators and the union are to be congratulated on having buried the hatchet at last. Certainly no one truly interested in improved industrial relations in Harlan County will begrudge John Lewis this potentially constructive victory.

Is it because the Harlan agreement does constitute a victory for Lewis that William Green, president of the A. F. of L., finds it so little to his liking? His attitude in the matter seems neither statesmanlike nor consistent. If the victory cannot be his, although the A. F. of L. miners' union in Harlan appears to be a decided minority, he would apparently prefer continuation of the evil conditions of the past. Such a suggestion may do Mr. Green an injustice. But his bitter charges anent the Harlan agreement certainly tend to create this unfortunate impression. If these charges are justified now why were they not made against agreements concluded by the U. M. W. when it was a part of the A. F. of L.?

While There Is Still Time.

The problem of the minorities in Czechoslovakia, though simmering for years, did not become acute until the seizure of Austria by Germany last March. In three respects this action placed the Reich in position to exercise overwhelming pressure on the little post-war democracy.

It increased the length of almost indefensible frontier open to military invasion from Germany. It brought nearly all the foreign trade of Czechoslovakia, which for the most part passes through either Hamburg or Vienna, under German control. And it enormously increased German influence and prestige throughout southeastern Europe, thereby minimizing the effectiveness of the Little Entente as a safeguard of Czechoslavak independence.

The Germans were quick to capitalize on the advantages gained by Anschluss. Immediately thereafter their attitude in regard to the minorities question in Czechoslovakia became increasingly truculent. This overbearing position was strengthened when the results of the Czechoslovak municipal elections in May and June revealed strong centrifugal tendencies in the Magyar, Slovak and Polish, as well as the German, sections of an undeniably heterogeneous state.

Up to the time of these elections, however, Hitler was feeling his way. Immediately after Anschluss the German government let it be known, and here in Washington Ambassador Dieckhoff said the same, that the Reich would be completely satisfied with cantonal autonomy in Czechoslovakia, transforming the present centralized government into a federal republic on the Swiss model. With this possible solution regarded as the extreme separatist position, negotiations between the Czech and Sudeten leaders were begun.

Increasingly, throughout the progress of these negotiations, it has become apparent that a solution of the problem preserving the integrity of Czechoslovakia is not desired in Berlin. All the early grievances of the German minority leaders have been met. Almost complete political autonomy has been offered the separatist districts, with the one proviso that Czech soldiers and police should continue to be stationed there. The original demand of reconstituting Czechoslovakia on the Swiss model has been largely, if not entirely, approved at Prague. But still the Sudeten leaders, under German inspiration, are far from satisfied. Now they indicate that they want independence like the Irish instead of autonomy like the German-Swiss.

It is the growing evidence that Henlein, with Hitler behind him, will stop at no negotiated settlement which makes distant Czechoslovakia of overshadowing importance to the United States today. There are ominous indications that Germany, using the alleged recalcitrance of the Prague government as an excuse, is getting ready to strike. Some sort of accord, insuring Hungarian and Italian benevolence in this eventuality, has probably been worked out. And it is charged that German agents are now filtering across the Czech frontier, to stir up the Sudeten revolt which would be the preliminary to actual military invasion.

It is in the hands of one man—Adolf Hitler—to decide whether or not this artificial Sudeten revolt shall be touched off. If his decision is affirmative another world war will be almost inescapable. There is no doubt that the Czechs will fight to preserve their hard-won independence. There is very little doubt that both Russia and France will come to their aid. In that event Hungary and even Italy might well become involved on the German side, while the Spanish civil war would immediately boil over as part of a major international conflict.

In this crisis British statesmanship, whatever its failings in late months, is today playing a major role of appeasement. Through the good offices of Viscount Runciman it is endeavoring to mediate the crisis on the spot. And as Runciman's efforts are blocked by German obduracy the Chamberlain government is sounding ever clearer warnings that in the event of war Great Britain, however unwillingly, will be drawn in.

This gives Hitler something to think about. Germany can easily conquer Czechoslovakia. With Italian, Hungarian and Fascist-Spanish assistance the enlarged Reich could quite possibly defeat both France and Russia. But if Great Britain enters the foreshadowed conflict the odds are otherwise. Eventual defeat—and this time that would mean the total collapse and partitioning of Germany—becomes a factor for sober consideration in Berlin.

Great Britain is therefore at her most farsighted in warning Germany, in ever stronger language, that there is no predicting how a war launched now in Czechoslovakia would end. But there is a real question as to whether the British warnings, though strong, are adequate. There is ample reason for believing that they should now be supplemented by explicit language from the United States.

Both President Roosevelt, in his recent speech in Canada, and Secretary Hull, in his radio address of August 16 and his statement of August 27, have talked around this point. But it is logical to believe that the time has come for the Administration to address itself directly to the issue in Czechoslovakia. It is logical to believe that a brief warning to Germany, at this moment, would be of more value to world peace than any other action that can be conceived.

Such a warning need have in it no animus or involvement of any kind. It need only point out officially the unquestionable truth that as the United States was drawn into a war which started in what is now Yugoslavia, so it may again reluctantly be drawn into one which may so easily be launched in Czechoslovakia. That is the fact. It would be no disservice to Germany to tell her so.

It would, on the contrary, help to turn Hitler from his present flirtation with the thought of military conquest to a negotiated solution of the Czech crisis. In such solution Germany stands to gain far more than Berlin thought was possible even a year ago.

"Voluntary" Contributions.

The provisions of the criminal code making it unlawful for a Federal employe to be asked to contribute funds for any political purpose whatever, at the solicitation of other Federal employes, appear to have been frequently violated in the primary contests.

The fact that overt compulsion is seldom exercised by those appealing for funds makes no difference, in the opinion of the chairman of the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee. In interpreting the existing law as forbidding voluntary contributions, Senator Sheppard takes issue with Treasury and Civil Service officials. But whatever the lawyers may decide about the exact scope of the law, it is undoubtedly a necessary precaution against abuse to ban all sorts of so-called "voluntary" contributions, whether solicited by a Federal official or an outsider.

It is common knowledge among those in the Government service that the line between the compulsory assessment, or "shakedown," and the so-called voluntary contribution is often nonexistent. Senator Sheppard and his committee are fully aware of the abuses, amounting to outright violation of the corrupt practices act, that have been permitted to flourish under the specious assumption that Federal officials feel free to ignore requests for "voluntary" contributions.

If there is any reason to believe that the existing law permits voluntary contributions to campaign funds at the solicitation of anyone, within or without the service, it should be amended. Federal employes are, as Senator Sheppard says, "working for the whole people whom they are supposed to serve impartially." If they are politically active, he adds, "they are also taking time from the efficient performance of their job." The only way to combat the more insidious kinds of "shakedowns" of Federal employes is to make it unlawful for any Federal employe to participate in any manner in a political campaign.

In addition to prohibiting this practice, positive penalties should be inflicted for violation of the law. Of course such a prohibition would work hardship upon a few Federal employes who value highly personal intervention for a cause in which they believe. Nevertheless it would be a great boon to many thousands of real civil servants who make heavy sacrifices to meet the "voluntary" contributions which they dare not neglect for fear of reprisals.

What a relief it would be to such Government workers if they could meet solicitation with the explanation that payment of any money whatever into a party campaign chest would be punishable by fine or possibly imprisonment.

Ireland's New Envoy.

Mr. Robert Brennan, the new Minister of the Republic of Eire to the United States, inherits from his predecessor an inestimable legacy of prestige and good will. Mr. Michael MacWhite, who a few months ago left to become Irish Minister to Rome, was one of the most successful and popular representatives that any foreign nation has ever sent to Washington.

There is, of course, no reason to suppose that this will be any the less true in the case of Mr. Brennan. He is no stranger to us, having served here for the four past years as the secretary of the legation. In one way, perhaps, Mr. Brennan may be said to be even more representative of the new Ireland than either of the men he succeeds, for he was one of that group whose tenacity of purpose and capacity for self-sacrifice, had most to do with bringing the new nation into being. That is to say, he was, like Pearse, Clarke, Collins and others, a member of the now famous Irish Republican Brotherhood.

What impressed Americans about the Irish Revolution, however, was not so much the successful culmination of the struggle with Britain, or even the skill with which it was waged, so much as the constructive genius displayed by its leaders.

The world was astonished at the sureness and swiftness with which a nation arose out of the wreckage of the Anglo-Irish conflict and the civil war that followed the treaty. A generation ago it might have been said that among the generality of Americans the Irish people were loved principally because of certain engaging weaknesses they were supposed to exhibit. Today it can be said that in America the Irish nation is respected because of its strength of character.

No one seems to be sympathizing with the railroads in their sad plight. No kindness has been shown them, in fact, since the man patted the locomotive attached to the train on which his wife left town for a month's vacation.

Congress should never be composed wholly of "yes" men. We need a liberal sprinkling of "yes, but . . ." men; a healthy minority of "no" men and here and there an obstreperous and cantankerous "hell, no!" man.

Jewish Names.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In choosing the Nazi decree requiring Jewish parents to name their children from an approved list of given names (which from the few specimens you have quoted appear to be of good old Hebrew and Yiddish derivation) to illustrate the "universally debasing character" of the latest Nazi decrees, I believe you have made a very poor selection.

Every Jewish child whose parents still treasure the traditions of their people is given one of these names and this is the name used in connection with all religious observances. I am quite sure that in bestowing these names on their offspring no Jewish parent, by the widest stretch of the imagination, believes he is stamping them as "pariahs."

It is true that these names, as a rule, do not appear on birth certificates and that the child is also given, what for want of a better term we may call, a civil name selected from names in common use and this latter name is the one by which the child is generally known. I have always thought that this was done primarily to facilitate the spelling and recording of the names by those who are not familiar with Hebrew. If the Nazis wish to burden themselves with jaw-breaking pronunciations, I, as an individual Jew and speaking solely for myself, do not see why anyone should object.

By the way, one of the permissible names for females, "Faugel" (the equivalent of "Birdie") is derived from the German. Looks like the Herr Name-Compiler is in for trouble . . . or can they always issue revised name lists.

Appreciation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have been reading most interestingly the articles you have been writing concerning Negroes, entitled, "Working for Washington," and have a great appreciation for what you are doing in that field. It will mean so much to the whole Negro race.

These are days when any word of commendation that can be said concerning the efforts of Negroes is needed, and any specific work that has been well done by Negroes needs emphasis. It is the real struggle of the Negro now to become more fully integrated into the American program and to have a larger participation in the administering of this program.

Please know how much we appreciate the attitude of your fine paper and your constant encouragement of our every effort to prove ourselves worthy of the confidence, mutual respect and co-operation of our friends.

Pegler On Prohibition.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Westbrook Pegler, in his column of August 29, implies that the South forced constitutional prohibition upon New York and other Northern States, and makes a comparison with carpetbag measures imposed upon the Southern States after the war.

The prohibition constitutional amendment was submitted by the House of Representatives 281 to 128, and by the Senate 65 to 20. In the House, only four State delegations—Maryland, New Jersey, New York and Rhode Island, divided adversely to prohibition, the aggregate vote being 18 for and 42 against.

The amendment had the support of 144 Democrats, 137 Republicans and 4 Independents.

National constitutional prohibition was ratified by 45 of the 48 State Legislatures and had the support of one House in another State. It was ratified by New York, January 29, 1919; 27 to 24 in the Senate, and 81 to 66 in the House. The total vote of the State Senates was 1,287 for, to 213 against—86 per cent dry. The total vote of the House was 3,742 for, 931 against—80 per cent dry.

In the face of this record, it is manifestly absurd to imply that the South, constituting one-fourth of the country, "put over" anything on New York or the Northern States. It was, in a peculiar sense, a national decision, made because all parts of the country believed it would result in economic and social benefit.

Sick Lion?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: President Roosevelt last week made a speech in Canada in which he pledged the United States to protect our good neighbor from invasion. I wonder if the President had something in mind other than a mere gesture of good will and a safe bet.

Is it possible that British prestige has fallen to such low ebb that a dominion under the Union Jack needs that protection? Do statesmen who are familiar with world affairs foresee the collapse of the British Empire?

How much damage was done to British prestige by (1) failure to close Suez and prevent the conquest of Ethiopia?; (2) failure to prevent Germany's first serious violation of the Versailles Treaty—the reoccupation of the Rhineland?; (3) failure to keep peace in Palestine?; (4) weakness in dealing with the situation in Spain?; (5) weakness in protecting her own ships and nationals in Spain and China?; (6) failure to protect Austria from being swallowed by Germany?; (7) weakness and reluctance in Czechoslovakia? (8) and now by Hungary?

Step by step British prestige bit the dust. In the League of Nations small nations looked to mighty Britain for leadership. They rallied around her in every point of view. But the greatest navy in the world stands by while ambitious dictators grow stronger and more powerful, swallow up and menace her friends. It is easy to understand then, why small nations in Europe are gradually deserting Britain.

Millions of men fought, suffered and died in the World War in vain. Downing street is in conference, sends a protest now and then while her former enemies realign themselves more powerfully than before. Here they are: The old triple alliance—Germany, Austria-Hungary and Italy—thirsty for vengeance, more defiant, ruthless than the Kaiser ever was.

And so the World War must be refought. People who have enjoyed the blessing of liberty and democracy will defend it in a holy war.

And so I wonder if the President's pledge for Canada's safety isn't something more important than a safe gesture. DAVID E. ROSE.

The Dies Inquiry.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Two of the "Letters to the Editor" on August 27, 1938, relative to The Post's "Poppycock" (Dies Committee) amused me considerably. Amused me bacause I cannot help laughing at the antics of those who continually exhort the virtues of the "old-fashioned American" in an effort to combat the wave of "isms" that seem to engulf our institutions. They amused me because they seem to have been written by the representatives of that class of citizen whose only reply to one who would advocate a slight change in the "status quo" is generally: "If you don't like this Government, why don't you go back to the old country?" or "If you like communism (this class generally labels as communists all Socialists, Laborites, most liberals and all pro-Spanish loyalists), why don't you go to Moscow?" How many of these pedagogues of patriotism realize that this Nation reaped its independence on the seeds of revolution, and it took a piece of literature that could not be surpassed in its subversion by any of the crimson exhortations of the Daily Worker to turn the tides toward independence by force.

As one who has shouldered a musket for gloria patria I believe in America and her so-called "manifest destiny." Consequently, I don't intend to wilt under the intellectual barrages of our parlor pinks, but neither do I aim to prostrate myself at the feet of those patriots who refuse to recognize the patriotism of liberals who strive toward social reorganization; dismissing them from the arena of argument, so to speak, with a blustering, "They're all a bunch of Reds and ought to be run out of the country."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Quintus Lucius Pro Bono Publico" (whatever that means) claims that with his own eyes he saw a letter written by Hitler, "alias Fritz Koppelfritz," to a Mr. Metro, of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, trying to borrow our Shirley Temple and the Dionne quintuplets in order to make a German movie in which Shirley would present Papa Mussolini, jr., with the five Dionne babies, who would grow into the role of Nazi mothers of 15 storm troopers for Herr Hitler. According to your correspondent who saw this letter with his own eyes, the sterling American Mr. Metro refused Hitler, and consequently Hitler is venting his wrath upon Shirley via the Dies "innocent front" ever since July a year ago.

For the benefit of this correspondent I would like to cite some facts which he appears so ignorant about in making up his ridiculous tale. Hitler's favorite girl friend is Leni Reifenstahl, who has been in the German film industry long enough to know who's who in the American film industry. Possibly Hitler has seen a few Metro films in Germany and some Shirley Temple films, so he would know who Shirley works for.

First of all, there is no such person as Mr. Metro. The firm name Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer resulted in 1924 from the merger of Marcus Loew's Metropolitan Studios, with the Samuel Goldwyn Co., and the Louis B. Mayer Co. Since Goldwyn is no longer associated with M-G-M, the head of the firm is Mr. Mayer, who could hardly be called a friend of the Nazi fanatics. I am certain that had Hitler so blindly asked for such co-operation, the powerful publicity departments of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and all of their Hollywood friends would have shouted it to the house tops. But who ever heard of the letter beyond our friend, Publico, who "saw it with my own eyes?"

Second: Shirley Temple does not work with M-G-M and never did. She has been the AA-1 asset of Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation ever since she entered motion pictures and attracted any attention. M-G-M probably couldn't get her if they tried. The Dionne quintuplets are not available to M-G-M either as they have been under contract with RKO-Pathe ever since their birth. Don't tell me that Twentieth-Century Fox, or RKO-Pathe have been reluctant to let the world, including Germany, know that they had Shirley and the Dionne babies under their sheltering contractual wings.

Such an example of the overworked imagination of Correspondent Publico is the sort of poppycock propaganda that intelligent American people are supposed to believe. EX-MARINE.

The Post Impressionist

The Evil Eye.

DID IT EVER happen to you to be walking through a safe and quiet meadow on a foggy day; to have the mist suddenly lift and let you see that your next step would have taken you over the edge of a cliff, dropping off into practically nowhere?

But that is a pleasant summer's diversion compared with the thing that happened to me once. It happened a long time ago in a distant State, and I had not thought of it for years until one day a chance word washed that bit of driftwood up from the sea of the subconscious.

I was standing at the door and a man outside was asking for "something to eat." One of the strays that came, a dozen a day in those years, selling pencils or shoestrings to get, at the best, a few pennies or food. Usually they were an undersized, feeble lot and mostly grateful for kindness if accompanied by cash. But it struck me that this one was different.

His shoulders were powerful under a thin and straining blouse. He was lean and muscular as a hound. Most of his kind never look at you directly but mumble a plea apparently to their worn and dusty shoes. This man threw back his head and looked me full in the eye. It was then that the precipice yawned. I was looking straight into something I never saw before, and, thank Heaven, I have not seen it since. In a face that was etched and scarred with hard living blazed a pair of animal's eyes, topaz, glittering. Exactly the eyes that you have thought so interesting in your pet cat's round face and so noble in the caged big cats at the Zoo. But wait until you see the same eyes in a human face!

It was a phenomenon that I had never known existed. I have learned since that others have experienced it. As I looked, hypnotized, I was certain that there was nothing this man would not do, if it struck his fancy; fickle as the cat that pounces on any moving thing that catches his eye. There was nothing in those eyes to which one could appeal, not one of the usual emotions that we label "human."

I did not linger on the brink, though I was operating at the time on some theory of special kindliness to all on the chance I might be an angel unaware, as they say. But it is something else when one finds an angel from the other end of the scale, caught in one's net. "How art thou fallen from heaven, O Lucifer, son of the morning!"

It was a long while before I was able to get together the few articles the man required, and I handed them through the door, still feeling the solid ground crumbling under my feet. I don't remember that he spoke again. One minute he was there; the next I was looking down a deserted street.

"Whew!" I thought. "There's your Middle Ages for you." Instantly, I realized the strange fact that with the unity of all experience, I had been seeing the same thing, though far removed in time and space, that medieval men, and men before them, must have seen. Now I understood the charms against the evil eye, the bullets made from church bells to slay the werewolf, the formulae of exorcism. The church bells rung by angels to silence the clamor of demons.

Like most so-called "superstitions" they had a fact and a meaning. No wonder the men of Florence and Rome needed supernatural defense, when such eyes might blaze suddenly from behind the folds of a cloak; when a peasant might see them in the face of a stranger demanding shelter on a bitter, winter night.

Fallen angel, beast-and-man, whatever way you chose to look at the matter, you were gazing into the open pit!

Later, I was telling a friend about the incident.

"Letting the imaginaion get in its work!" he replied. "Your man was probably just a poor fellow down in his luck, and cursed by a physical peculiarity. He probably was all right."

"Oh, yes, he probably was!" I was only too anxious to believe it.

And then, I thought of another incident. I had been chaperoning a nice oldish lady, one without the slightest iota of imagination, on a trip through the Zoo. We had passed a cage of snakes in some rather sickening antics, and I had treated the guest to some of the more replusive apes, when suddenly she grasped me by the arm, crying, "Oh, take me out of here." I was not much charmed with the place and was glad to comply. She began to cry softly, "Oh, that creature, that monkey, she was looking at me just like another woman!" I never enjoyed the monkeys much thereafter.

I came to the conclusion that the Aesops and the L'aFontaines were definitely not down my alley. As far as I was concerned they could keep their talking animals to themselves. Come to think, I had never cared much for them even as a child. Animals that verged too close on the human, or men and women that published too plainly the animal strain—they might make nice reading if you happen to care for that sort of thing. Personally, I will take my genera, fictional or real, with as sharp a line of demarcation as possible.

Abuse From Italy.

LAST WEEK a newspaper in Milan, Italy, speaking by authority of the Italian government, called this country a Nation of gangsters.

Last Sunday the New York Times reprinted from another Milan paper a cartoon showing five armed and masked hoodlums, one of them pointing a machine gun, driving along an American city street where a group of Russian Communists, armed with bombs, gave them a fraternal salute.

On the same page the Times published a dispatch from Camille Cianfarra, of its Rome bureau, which said that since 1936 "the Italian press has been printing articles and news showing the worst aspects of American life."

"As for the American people as a whole," Cianfarra wrote, "according to an article in the April 3 issue of the Corriere Della Sera, the 'majority of them are ignorant and irresponsible.'"

Quoting from the "widely read" magazine Omnibus, Cianfarra reports that "the American man is naive, slow-witted, gross, obtuse and bent only on profit and physical competitions," while the American woman "values everything, even a man, in terms of dollars."

• • • •

THESE and all other expressions of a similar kind, all hateful, many of them deliberately vicious, are not expressions of individual Italian editors and artists. They are expressions of the Italian government authorized through its press bureau in Rome.

Every line of copy, every cartoon or photograph that goes into an Italian paper is an expression of the Italian government and is in effect as much a state paper as though it had been issued under Mussolini's own signature.

The campaign against this country and its people has been persistent and increasingly bitter ever since President Roosevelt in his Chicago speech cited the dictators as international disturbers and accused them of destroying confidence in international agreements—provable charges, both.

Cianfarra writes that it can safely be said that hardly a good word about the United States generally has been heard in Italy since November, 1936.

• • • •

IN PLAINER TERMS, a blackmailer government sets as the price of its forbearance from slander and abuse of this country and its people, including those who call themselves Italo-Americans, complete submission to a course of conduct which menaces the peace and lives of Americans and silent approval of any predatory outrage which Italy may commit anywhere. American acquiescence, even by silent consent, is a valuable thing to a marauder, because American prestige is great.

Denied this aid for her designs, present and future, Italy has resorted to the common method of the blackmailer and relies on the racial feeling of immigrant Italians and their near descendants in the United States for sympathy. Mussolini flatters American citizens who edit Italian newspapers by letting them regard themselves as unofficial interpreters of the great Duce and unofficial resenters of any retort to his savage abuse of the American people.

All Americans, of whatever origin or strain, owe resentment to Mussolini and the Italian government as at present conducted for vilification of their country and its people. For all who count themselves American are included in the unremitting, conscienceless calumnies directed against this country by the Italian government through a press which is formally defined and strictly conducted as an official means of national expression.

• • • •

NOTHING THAT has been published in the American press in retort to some of the more wanton expressions in Mussolini's press has even approached the reckless and cynical hatred of the Italian press campaign against the United States.

On the contrary, the American press has made allowances for a warlike state of mind and local Italian problems which may not be fully understood here. It also has restrained itself out of the elaborate consideration for the sensitiveness of Americans of Italian birth or descent who realize that Italy hates the democracy which they enjoy and love but distinguish between the Fascist nation and the people who comprise that nation and serve its warlike leaders.

Does any Italo-American editor or leader take occasion to defend his country against the bitter anti-Americanism of Italy, where hardly a good word has been heard of the United States since 1936? Why all the solicitude for Italy? This is the United States; these are the American people under abuse by Italy.

Botanist of C. U. Delayed by Ice on Arctic Expedition

Father Artheme Dutilly, Catholic University botanist, has been delayed by an ice blockade from reaching the northernmost point of his Arctic expedition, university officials learned yesterday.

Father Dutilly left Montreal last month aboard the Therese to continue his survey of Arctic life and to take supplies to mission stations maintained in the Canadian Arctic by the Oblate Fathers.

His next stop is the Eskimo village of Iglulik, off the coast of Baffin land. Locked in ice, the ship will be unable to pass through the Frozen Strait until a long overdue gale arrives to drive the ice offshore.

Father Paul Schulte, "flying priest," learned of the ship's plight several days ago and flew around the spot looking in vain for an opening in the barrier, the university announced.

The Labor Act

Employer Groups Hold That The Measure As It Now Stands Unjustly Stacks The Cards In The Unions' Favor.

By Richard L. Turner,
Associated Press Staff Writer.

(Editor's note: This is the second of five articles on the coming Congressional battle over amendments to the Wagner national labor relations act. It sets forth the attitude of employers. Subsequent articles will present the viewpoints of the American Federation of Labor and the Committee for Industrial Organization, and the implications of the study of the British labor laws initiated by President Roosevelt.)

MOST BUSINESSMEN think the Wagner act weights the scales of justice far too heavily on the side of labor.

The law's prohibitions are aimed at "unfair labor practices" by employers. Businessmen complain that it says nothing about such methods used by unions.

To the unions alone is given the right to file complaints with the National Labor Relations Board, the agency which administers the act. The employer is always the defendant in proceedings before the board.

Many businessmen consider, too, that the board, by its interpretations of the law, has delegated to itself broad powers which Congress did not intend that it should have. They regarded as a case in point the board's ruling that, when collective bargaining negotiations produce an agreement between union and employer the latter must then embody that agreement in a signed contract.

And employers chafe especially at being forbidden to give their men what they consider kindly and well-intentioned advice on the question of joining a union, while union men are free, the employers contend, to use any tactics in bringing their fellow workers into membership.

• • • •

TOM M. GIRDLER, the plain-spoken chairman of the Republic Steel Corporation, against whom leaders of organized labor have uttered more anathemas than any other industrialist, told the La Follette Civil Liberties Committee recently:

Before the passage of the Wagner act "you were commended if you had close relations with your men—now it's an unfair labor practice. It didn't use to be called coercion if you said to a man: 'Bill I don't think it is a good thing for you to join the union. You are probably better off if you don't.'"

Almost universally, the employers ask that the application of the law—as between restrictions on management and on the labor unions—be "evened up." And the first step in this process they obviously consider to be an amendment forbidding the unions as well as the employers to use coercive or intimidating tactics.

"No coercion from any source" is a phrase which, by constant reiteration, has assumed the aspects of an employers' slogan.

The Chamber of Commerce of the United States asks that forbidden "unfair labor practices" be made to include damage to property in labor disputes; sympathy strikes and strikes designed to force anyone to commit an illegal act, and the transportation of pickets across State lines.

It wants amendments, too, to relieve an employer of any obligation to deal with a union except concerning those employes who are members of that union, or to bargain with a union when "the real issue in controversy" is the check-off or closed shop. The check-off is a system by which union dues are collected by the employer out of the workers' pay; the closep shop is one in which all employes must be members of the union.

• • • •

STILL ANOTER objective of the chamber is an amendment to make it illegal for a majority of the employes who seek a closed shop, on the ground that such a result would violate the individual rights of the minority.

And in instances in which continuous production is threatened by a row between rival unions as to which represents the employes, the chamber asks that employers have the privilege or requesting the board to settle the question.

The National Association of Manufacturers subscribes to most of these proposed amendments—and many more. It proposes, too, an extension of "unfair labor practices" to include a number of union activities, with the added proviso that a union which violates such a section be barred from all recourse to the benefits of the act for one year.

To the chamber's list of unfair labor tactics, the manufacturers' association would add: General strikes; strikes called without presentation of demands and time for their adjudication; strikes in violation of collective bargaining agreements; strikes to compel the employment or discharge of any person because of membership or non-membership in a union; and "illegal occupation of property" such as in sit-down strikes.

AS TO CHARGES that the board has leaned over backward to favor the unions, and especially the Committee for Industrial Organization, the N. A. M. is of the opinion that the rectification of that situation lies with the board itself.

"Serious charges have been made that the board and its examiners have not maintained a very high standard of impartiality, and that its procedure and the delay and expense involved are grossly unfair," say John C. Gall and Raymond S. Smethurst, counsel to the N. A. M. "An intense feeling of distrust toward the board does exist on a wide scale. Unless this feeling can be overcome and the board demonstrates its impartiality, it is extremely doubtful whether any amendments adopted will bring about any material improvements."

Says George H. Davis, president of the chamber:

"The labor relations act and its administration exert influences working strongly against economic recovery. Proceedings of the Labor Board have not been fair and impartial and there has been ample demonstration of the fact that the legislation has not fulfilled its stated purpose of lessening industrial disputes . . .

'All provisions of the act should be so formulated as to assure impartiality of administration as between employers and employes and as between particular kinds of labor organizations.'"

Harrison Repeats Spending Warning; Praises Roosevelt

Jackson, Miss., Aug. 30 (AP).—Senator Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, served new notice today of his independence of the Administration on major fiscal policies.

Informally addressing the State Democratic committee, here to ratify renomination of Mississippi's Congressional delegation, Senator Harrison praised the President as a "great humanitarian leader" but declared "excessive Federal spending must cease."

Senator Harrison thanked the State committee for recently indorsing him for the Presidential nomination but added he had not been "touched by the Presidential bee." He added:

"I regret to say that I do not believe any man from the deep South will ever be President."

'Invading' Maryland

By Ernest Lindley

Senator Tydings And Patronage.

SENATOR MILLARD E. TYDINGS, of Maryland, is a candidate for renomination to the United States Senate by the Democratic Party.

From the text and tenor of his speeches an uninformed reader might readily conclude either that Maryland is not part of the United States or that Mr. Tydings is a candidate for a purely local office instead of for the upper body of the national—or, if you prefer, Federal—Legislature.

Mr. Tydings describes the expression of opinion by Mr. Roosevelt concerning the Maryland senatorial primary as an "invasion." Mr. Roosevelt, like Mr. Tydings, is accountable to the voters of Maryland for his actions and his omissions. He has twice presented himself as a candidate to the voters of Maryland and twice has received their generous indorsement.

Presumably, Mr. Tydings did not consider Mr. Roosevelt an "invader" on either occasion. In 1932, when Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Tydings were candidates for office at the same election, Mr. Tydings exhibited no sign of displeasure over Mr. Roosevelt's visit to Baltimore. He voiced no complaint that the right of the voters of Maryland to make a free choice was being infringed upon or that the separation of executive and legislative powers set forth in the Constitution was being violated by his appearance on the same platform and the same ticket with the Presidential candidate of his party.

SENATOR TYDINGS has raised a cry of alarm over the forced resignation of a Federal officeholder who was supporting him and over the prospect that other Federal officeholders who support him will be suuplanted in due course by persons favorable to the policies of Mr. Roosevelt. These Federal officers, holding appointive positions outside the classified civil service, belong to the executive branch of the Governmnt. Under the theory of complete separation of powers, as expounded by Senator Tydings, they should be responsive to the Chief Executive alone. Some of them were, in fact, chosen by Senator Tydings, or by his campaign manager, Senator Radcliffe.

It looks as if Senator Tydings had been transgressing upon the prerogatives of the Chief Executive. In fact, the Congress has seriously impaired the independence of the executive branch. It requires Senate confirmation for a multitude of Federal officeholders who, under the pure theory of the Constitution, should be responsible only to the Chief Executive. More than that, senatorial courtesy forbids, or at least discourages, the confirmation of an officeholder who has not been indorsed by the particular Senators or Senator who represent both his own State and the party to which the President belongs.

This impairment of the independence of the Executive is no less real because it is time-honored. It is a product of the party system of government which, without uniting the legislative and the executive, has brought co-ordination between them. The President surrenders part of his freedom of choice of agents in return for the co-operation of the members of his party in Congress. Or, to approach it from a different angle, the members of the legislative branch are supposed to know which appointments in their localities will best serve the purposes of the party, on which the President and the majority members of Congress are supposed to be in essential agreement.

• • • •

BY HIS VOTING RECORD Senator Tydings has shown that his political views and purposes are far removed from those of Mr. Roosevelt and of a majority of the members of his own party. The really puzzling question in Maryland is why Senator Tydings has had any Federal patronage to be deprived of.

Senator Radcliffe seeks to justify the renomination of his colleague on the ground, among others, that the Democratic Party has always tolerated free discussion and that 'an honest, intelligent critic can be as helpful as an honest, intelligent advocate." Senator Radcliffe also comments that "a new policy, or an old one revamped, which will not stand the fire of hostile criticism, must have a defect in it which is basic."

These propositions would receive general assent in every democratic nation. With them should be considered Burke's classic definition of a party:

"A party is a body of men united for promoting by their joint endeavors the national interest upon some principle on which they all are agreed."

• • • •

THERE IS no formula for determining where intraparty differences of opinion—which must exist when most of the voters in a continental nation of 48 States are divided into two parties—become a conflict of principles. The role of persistent critic which Senator Radcliffe ascribes to Senator Tydings is that which is usually considered the function of the opposition.

Most observers of Congress would concede that Senator Tydings is a more vigorous and industrious critic of the Roosevelt Administration than are most of the Republican Senators and Representatives. The only real question before the Maryland Democrats is whether or not Mr. Tydings expresses more accurately than Representative Lewis, a lifelong progressive Democrat, their estimate of the Roosevelt program.

The Trotters.

HERE is Dwight Akers' "Drivers Up: The Story of American Harness Racing" Putnam's, $5), written for laymen and full of good old Orange County excitement. The nearest this reporter has ever come to a first-class horse race was to attempt to drive through Goshen, N. Y., on a Hambletonian Day, when Goshen's traffic problems resembled those of Times Square during an American Legion Convention; but if a rank tyro dare venture an opinion, Mr. Akers has done a good job. He writes with gusto, and he fits his sport into a pageant of American history.

• • • •

FOR HALF A CENTURY the rise of the great trotters was a long series of Horatio Alger stories. Messenger, the English stallion which charged off an inbound English ship in Philadelphia in 1788, whose blood flows in all the great race horses of today, had a known record. But the owners of Messenger's most famous children never knew of the famous blood until after their animals had won fame and set the historians to tracing their lineage.

Topgallant was a Philadelphia hack horse, and old, when a good horseman observed him and his harness mate in a runaway. The observer bought the old hack; Topgallant passed from one hand to another, and won his greatest race in 1829, in his twenty-second year. In those days races were no sissy mile-lengths. Topgallant ran four heats of four miles each; he won the first, lost the second, tied the third, and took the final. His time, for the 16 miles, averaged 2:58½, a noble record for that day.

Only ten years before, large bets were placed in New York that no horse could be found fast enough to trot a mile to sulky in 3 minutes or better. The year after Topgallant ran that race, a London expert, commenting on the new American records, suggested that American miles must be shorter than English. A 2:35 record had been laid down. "I apprehend," said the authority, "no horse ever did, or could, trot over the measured English miles in that short space of time. From the excessive rapidity of his trot his feet woul be apt to strike fire and set him in a blaze."

Lady Suffolk, first to run a mile under two minutes and a half, had, like Topgallant, Messenger's blood in her, but hers was also an Alger story. She was drawing an oyster wagon on Long Island when Dave Bryan, a liveryman, bought her for $112.50. That was in 1835; she was 2 years old. Bryan ran her in 162 races in the next 16 years, and made his fortune. In 1843 at Hoboken she broke the world's record three times in successive heats.

Dutchman was another democrat, who pulled a brick wagon before showing his heels along Third avenue. Dutchman ran the tracks for years, then returned to Third avenue.

THE "OLD GRAY MARE of Long Island," Lady Suffolk, was still going strong in 1850 when a drover from Madison County, N. Y., started for New York with a herd of beef cattle. Behind the cows trailed a bob-tailed mare, for which the owner had paid $13. In Washington Hollow, back of Poughkeepsie, Jonathan Vielee looked her over and bought her for $175. She was Flora Temple, one of the greatest horses of all time, whose fame reached into the citadels of American culture. Mr. Akers somehow missed the story that Van Wyck Brook tells—how Ralph Waldo Emerson, in his Concord study, corrected Oliver Wendell Holmes, the autocrat of half New England's breakfast tables. Dr. Holmes had misstated Flora Temple's time by a quarter second; it was 2:19¾, run at Kalamazoo on October 15, 1859. The Concord philosopher had it right.

So the stories drift down the decades, through the days of Commodore Vanderbilt and of Robert Bonner, who knew and loved good horses but would not bet; and of Bill Rysdyk, Jonas Seely's illiterate hired man, who bought a crippled mare, bred her to an ill-tempered stallion named Abdallah (soon to be turned out on the beach as worthless) and produced the great Hambletonian; of Leland Stanford's wholesale experiments in colt-training out in California and the rise of the great Kentucky establishments; of Charlie Williams, the butter-and-egg man of Ossian, Iowa, whose lowly Axtell kept smashing the records established by Stanford's expensive fillies; on to Dan Patch, whose records have stood unmatched for more than 30 years.

Zero Hour In Prague

By Mary N. Howes.

Prague.

AS WAR CLOUDS trail back and forth over Bohemia, the eyes of Prague are on Berlin and London. It is there, and not here that chaos can be averted. But if it comes, Czechoslovakia is determined to resist.

Negotiations and concessions can not solve the immediate crisis, however beneficial they may be in veiling a breach or improving the status of minorities. For as Czechs, Slovaks and even non-Nazi Sudeten Germans will tell you, "The crisis is not national but international. There is nothing the government can do to solve it. Yet if Hitler were not in Berlin the German minority problem could be settled in a day; or if Britain would give us strong support there would be no war." Everywhere, except in the imposing sanctum of the Henleinist headquarters there is the same answer.

But the British government wanted time, for every day that passes without a conflict seems to it a primary victory. London hoped to reconcile the Czechslovak government and the Sudeten Party, and perhaps thought that this alone would avert the danger. For the English pin great faith in compromise, failing to realize that the Germans believe a compromise is always dishonest and only acceptable pending the moment it can be discarded for complete victory. So Chamberlain set Lord Runciman adrift in Prague without so much as an official status. If he should achieve a reconciliation, all well and good. If not, the British government wouldn't assume any obligation to act against the party which proved uncompromising.

• • • •

THE CZECH REACTION to the Runciman mission was very mixed. The Prague government never asked for an adviser, but it had no choice except to welcome the latest notion of Chamberlain for the "appeasement of Europe." The atmosphere was fast growing tense as the Henleinists derided the government proposals. Many Czechs felt keenly the injustice of singling out their country, and applying international pressure on her alone in the matter of minorities. For whatever wrongs may have been committed, obviously she has handled her minorities far better than most if not all the other nations of Europe. And since the threat of war comes from Berlin and not Prague—to the Czechs it seems underhanded to apply the heavy hand here and not there.

Although no one believes that Lord Runciman can solve the essential question—whether Hitler will attack—still the Czechs realize that his presence here is of distinct value. Firstly, a German aggression is thought much less likely while he is on the spot. Secondly, as one Czech put it, "Lord Runciman cannot help us, but he can help the British government." He can keep it informed of the exact situation; and the Czechs believe that during negotiations he must certainly recognize the good faith of their government and the underlying motives of the Henleinists.

In past years Henlein has been in London, proclaiming the justice of his cause and talking democracy. It has taken time for certain British circles to realize that he is genuinely Nazi. But Lord Runciman is now here as a trusted witness of the British government; and he, the Czechs believe, will testify as to who is blocking the long-desired appeasement.

• • • •

DURING THE THIRD WEEK in August the Sudeten Party refused to meet with the Parliamentary Coaliton Committee of Six and the government, insisting rather on negotiating with the government separately and on equal terms while the coaliton committee met elsewhere. The Henleinists claim that since it is a question of changing the constitution and not simply a party matter they will deal only with the state. But they probably cherish the prestige and power of dealing with the government, instead of having the government act as moderator between them and the coaliton committee of six.

The Henleinists also refused categorically to negotiate on the proposed nationalities statute. They dared demand that the government should accept the Carlsbad program of their party leader as a basis for future discussion. One of the points of that program is, of course, the demand for territorial autonomy with the Henleinists ruling their different territories, but naturally in accordance with Nazi philosophy. When I ventured to ask Dr. Derer, minister of justice, for his opinion on such a state within a state, he answered immediately, "It would be absolutely impossible to have an autonomous totalitarian state within a democratic nation." The two sides are irreconcilable.

If Lord Runciman had not been here when the Henleinists refused even to consider the government proposals as a basis for discussion, a stalemate might have resulted; and any stalemate is a possible excuse for Hitler to act. But Lord Runciman went off to Rothenhaus, the castle of Prince Max von Hohenlohe, to meet Henlein, who had kept splendidly aloof from the negotiations at Prague. In his role of Fuehrer, Henlein, apparently, could not stoop to come to Prague, as in the past he has not stooped to enter Parliament! As one Henleinist explained to me, "Henlein is our Fuehrer. He does not concern himself with details; that is a job for his subordinates. He is only concerned with decisions." Being concerned only with decisions, he can always disavow the action of his inferiors.

• • • •

THE PEOPLE are impatient for a decision one way or the other. Waiting from week to week for "der tag" when Hitler will attack creates a nervous strain. It is hardly apparent, for life goes on at the same busy tempo. The calmness of the Czechs was a mystery to visitors even last year, and today it is little short of a miracle. It is part of their strength and their defense. They believe they can do nothing to prevent war, except to show determination to defend their frontiers, and to win the admiration of countries (particularly England) whose backing they think would suffice to guarantee peace.

Once during the long months of watching and waiting the Czechoslovaks showed that whatever the decision of the powers, they were prepared to resist invasion. Their mobilization on May 21, when people had to be turned away from the barracks, demonstrated beyond doubt their intent to defend themselves. Here that day has become the dividing date of all time, one speaks of events as having happened either before or after the twenty-first.

But the threat of war loses its effect when ever-present. People appear only mildly curious when the air-raid drill sirens screech. Yet if you question them there is a certain bravado in their determination to fight if it comes to that. In the words of one member of the foreign office, "We must incline before the majesty of the people. There is not a worker or peasant who if asked would not say he would take up a gun to defend his home."

The road to Prague is not open as was the road to Vienna. The Czechs are convinced they could hold out alone for a surprising time—three months or so—and that during that time other nations would be forced to come to their aid. France, Russia and in the long run England would have to take arms against the growing plague of aggression—a plague which unfortunately breeds on the desires of others for peace at any price.

The outcome of this crisis defies prediction. Lord Runciman may succeed in keeping negotiations afloat until the approach of winter relieves the danger of attack. Behind its impenetrable veil of diplomatic secrecy the mission may be able to work out a patchwork compromise, each side accepting it in the hope that time will be on their side. But if, in spite of everything, the crisis ends in invasion, then Czechoslovakia will rise in its own defense.

A. F. L. Charges C. I. O. Miners Rule by Terror

Green Asks Congressional Investigation of Lewis Union Practices.

By the Associated Press.

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 30.—Demanding a Congressional investigation, the American Federation of Labor executive council charged in a statement tonight that John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers Union had "instituted a reign of terror" in the Illinois, Kansas and West Virginia coal fields.

At the same time, Joseph Ozanic, of Chicago, president of the Progressive Miners of America, chartered by the A. F. of L. as a rival to Lewis' C.I.O. union, declared Lewis levied a special assessment on his mine union members which was used in part to defray expenses of the C.I.O. ticket in the Pennsylvania primary election battle.

Ask Congressional Inquiry.

William Green, president of the A. F. of L., issued a statement that the executive council, after hearing Ozanic report on the C. I. O.-A. F. of L. rivalry in the coal fields, wanted a Congressional committee to investigate these charges:

That officials of the United Mine Workers' Union have instituted a reign of terror in the coal fields of Illinois, West Virginia and Kansas.

That these union officials are working in conspiracy with the coal mine operators to dominate and control the mine workers and to exclude the A. F. of L. from the fields.

That these union officials have allied with State and Federal Government agencies to perpetuate the U. M. W.'s control in the coal fields, contrary to the desire of the miners themselves.

The council expressed its demand for a Congressional inquiry in a resolution directing Green to carry the federation's complaint, not only to Congress, but to the Justice Department and the National Labor Relations Board.

Charge "Violence."

The council said it had received documentary evidence that the C. I. O. mine workers union used "violence, lawlessness and intimidation" to deprive miners in the three States of their civil liberties and prevent organization meetings of the A. F. L. union.

Ozanic estimated the Progressives, chartered only last May, had a membership of between 40,000 and 45,000.

The council statement said:

"The very United Mine Workers' leaders who have protested so bitterly about the denial of free speech and assemblage to workers in Harlan County, Ky., and Jersey City, N. J., have themselves imposed far more repressing conditions on workers in communities where the U. M. W. operates, absolutely depriving them of civil liberties."

The council declared the U. M. W. methods were "even worse" than those they once accused the Harlan coal operators of using in the union conflicts in "bloody Harlan County."

Hopkins Defends Roosevelt's Intervention in State Votes

Hopkins

right, but the duty, to discuss public measures fully and frankly with the electorate."

Hopkins directly charged that the leadership of the "opposition"—which he called the "streamlined Tories of 1938"—are "right now putting their full strength in men and money in half a dozen States behind candidates who have been most hostile to the things for which this Administration stands.

"And the leadership of the opposition is today urging thousands upon thousands of people who never had any desire to enter a Democratic primary before, and have no desire to do so now, to register and help defeat the aims of President Roosevelt—not in a clean-cut general election where the divergent views of parties are clearly understood by the voters but stealthily, within the councils of our own party."

The speech delivered before an audience of the Northeastern Conference of Democratic Women at the Statler Hotel here, was broadcast nationally.

It was one of the most spirited political speeches made by Hopkins since his rise in the New Deal. He took his keynote throughout from the strongest speech ever made by President Roosevelt, the heated battle-cry of the Presidents address which closed his 1936 campaign at Madison Square Garden, when he declared, "We have just begun to fight."

Hits WPA Critics.

Hopkins slashed sharply at critics of the WPA and of the Administration generally in a lengthy review of Administration achievements.

He struck at the slogan: "We must restore confidence," often uttered by the United States Chamber of Commerce and numerous other business organizations, saying:

"You find it has a different meaning each time it is uttered. To some it means the removal of all Government restriction, which we think of as rules of fair play. To many it means shifting the tax burden from high incomes to the common man. To stock market speculators it means the repeal of the safeguards thrown around the investor's money, and to a hundred other categories of people it means a hundred other things.'"

Recalls 1932.

He said that in his opinion confidence was produced by profits, and that "Business has lots of it when profits are high and has a lack of it when profits are low . . . For three years prior to 1933 our friends gave us the confidence treatment. They even left orders that unemployment figures should be hushed up in order not to disturb the treatment. They reduced surtax rates, they reduced wages, they trampled upon the rights of collective bargaining. They didn't give any Federal relief, but they issued statements about rugged individualism."

He hit at "the streamlined Tory of 1938" in declaring that the opposition to the New Deal was entirely without a program, adding: "Basically it believes that the Government should do virtually nothing but deliver the mail."

In reference to charges that Republicans have crossed party-lines to vote against 100 per cent New Deal Democrats—charges made by the President when he termed such an action "political immorality"—Hopkins said:

"Because the Republicans had no reasonable hope of success through their own party, they have attempted to transfer their attentions to the Democratic Party. Just as the Tories in 1776 stirred up intrigues and factions and splits among the Revolutionary colonists, so do the Tories of today stir up divisions in the Democratic Party.

Matter of "Logic."

"The object of political campaigns is to win elections. It was therefore inevitable that the conflict between the Administration and the Tories would shift at least partially from the general elections to a few of the primaries within the Democratic Party.

"This is not just a piece of logic. It is an accomplished fact. The leadership of the opposition is right now putting its full strength in men and money behind candidates who have been most hostile to the things for which this Administration stands."

Hopkins charged that the opposition "has given up its identity as well as its integrity, for a better chance to win."

Then he quoted at length from the President's famous Madison Square Garden speech before comparing the anti-New Deal Democrats to "the young man who abandoned his father and mother and then asked for public sympathy on the ground that he was an orphan."

After blasting the opposition Democrats, Hopkins asked: "Under those circumstances what would you expect the President, as the leader and the spokesman of his party, to do? He is merely saying: 'These men who came into office with the Administration no longer support the Administration. If you believe in the Administration and want to help it, do not send these men back. If you oppose the Administration these are your men.'"

He then quoted from a letter written by George Washington to a member of his Cabinet, in which the first President said: "I shall not, whilst I have the honor to administer the Government, bring a man into any office of consequence knowingly whose political tenets are adverse to the measures which the general Government are pursuing, for this in my opinion would be a sort of political suicide."

Hopkins concluded by remarking: "I know the President. Neither abuse nor flattery, neither pressure nor ridicule, will sway him from the pact he and his party have made with the American people. Adulation has not made him arrogant, defeat has not made him timid.

"What we have to decide is whether to go back or go ahead—whether to wink at social and economic injustice or to correct it—whether we want prosperity and profits for a few or prosperity for all—whether we want weasel words or real leadership — whether, in short, we want to abdicate the stronghold of democracy or to fight for it.

"And I think we, too, have only 'just begun to fight.'"

Representative Norton (Democrat), of New York), asserted at a luncheon conference that the wage and hours law would "bring back to New England a great deal of the industries that have migrated South."

Mrs. Norton, chairman of the House Labor Committee, said:

"Hundreds of thousands of persons now working for as little as $3 a week throughout the country will be directly benefitted by this bill. It has accomplished the ambition of President Roosevelt to raise the wages of the lowly paid worker."

Safety School Planned to Cut Traffic Deaths

The Post and Junior Board Sponsor 10-Week Lecture Series.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

A permanent Traffic Safety Institute, designed to promote safer driving on District streets and to provide motorists with a broader knowledge of traffic regulations, will open next month as part of The Washington Post-Junior Board of Commerce accident prevention program.

Under the direction of Joseph Kadens, safety authority of the War Department, the institute will offer a ten-week series of lectures and practical safety demonstrations. Sessions will be held once a week, conducted by nationally known leaders in the field of accident control.

Kadens has arranged to enliven the institute course with outstanding safety motion pictures and other unique mediums of impressing Washington drivers with the increasing necessity for caution on the highway.

2,000 Drivers Signed.

With more than 2,000 drivers—the majority operators of light and heavy delivery trucks—already enrolled in The Post-Junior Board movement, company officials of the numerous firms pledged to safety have agreed to send their drivers to the meetings.

Final details of the institute program will be announced following an organization meeting tonight.

Meanwhile, the garage firm of Call Carl, Inc., whose employes are already familiar with the city's daily accident picture, joined The Post-Junior Board safety plan yesterday and pledged support of current and future efforts to curb accidents.

Edmund O. Carl, co-proprietor of the concern, said he would provide his more than 100 employes with the new Post-Junior safety emblem and would caution his drivers.

Bystander Injured.

In the face of efforts by official and civic groups to arouse public interest in safety, several persons were injured in traffic accidents last night. One of the injured was crushed when a car overturned following a collision.

Victim of the freak accident was Seldon Lewis, colored, 47, 520 E street northeast, injured after a collision at Sixth and E streets northeast between cars operated by James H. Lucas, 20, of 1305 Seventeenth street southeast, and Carroll M. Edwards, 27, of 124 Jefferson street northwest.

Edwards' car overturned and crushed Lewis, who had been sitting on the bumper of a car parked in front of 602 E street northeast. He was rushed to Casualty Hospital, where he was said to have internal injuries, and a possible fracture of the skull.

Thomas Galloway, colored, 45, 641 Eighth street northeast, suffered a concussion when he was struck at Maryland avenue and G street northeast by a motorcycle operated, police said, by Samuel W. Schwartz, 22, of Branchville, Md. Galloway was admitted to Casualty Hospital. His condition was believed serious.

At the Young Men's Christian Association today, Capt. Milton D. Smith, commander of the police traffic division, will offer the second in a series of safety lectures to members of the boys' department.

His talk will be followed by a sound motion picture, "Hit and Run Driver," presented by Richard Ham, safety director of the American Automobile Association.

The lecture series, for youngsters between the ages of 9 and 14, will continue until school reopens. The program was launched last week to educate the children in traffic safety and is conducted by W. T. Fry and E. H. Thacker, associate director of the Y. M. C. A. boys' department.

Permanent Plan Studied.

Having accepted from his citizens advisory committee recommended methods of dealing with the present "emergency" problem, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen last night awaited the committee's report on a permanent long-range safety program.

The special committee, headed by Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, commander of the District National Guard, will meet tomorrow night.

It is expected that heretofore untried methods of attacking the complex traffic problem will be submitted to Hazen for final approval. He has agreed to act promptly in placing the suggested program in operation.

At Capital Night Clubs

Bebe Allen, Vienese-American songbird at the new Hour Glass.

By Mary Harris.

Hour Glass is running! Not with sands, but with refreshment and entertainment. Last evening's opening and today's doings are in the nature of tune-up runs. The formal opening with a full roster of entertainers will be celebrated tomorrow.

A fine foursome of diversionists will fill the air with melody at Hour Glass. They are:

Bebe Allen, Viennese revue and operetta star. She's of American parentage, but looks the twin of Simone Simon and sings a lot better, thinks H. G. Operator Vincent Gallegher, and so do we.

Evelyn Knight, the honey-blonde honey, whose pretty canarying you've probably enjoyed on numberless evenings in the King Cole Room.

Vincent de la Garza, the Manhattan Latin, whom you hear over the radio regularly. Shines especially in those haunting, torchy songs that are indigenous to Mexico City. Can do things, we mean plenty, to a guitar.

Abe Clar, pianist—and one of the finest. Can play anything from Berlin to Tschaikowsky, from Cohan to Ravel, but we understand that he has a sneaking preference for Chopin.

The Hour Glass, as you should know by now, is urban-decorated, meaning that it is done in the most impeccable modernist metier—gay and colorful but restful and relaxing at the same time. Its cuisine, beverages and service are also at the top of the upper brackets. It will be open for luncheon, afternoon cocktails, dinner and from there on until two good morning.

Madrilon will begin to stay open on Sundays this fall on Sept. 11, Sunday after next. Peter Borras tells us that the Sunday dinners will be special-special, something like those Thursday feasts that always pack the place.

Comes a card from Madrillon's Martin, who seems to be at Asbury Park, N. J., and vows he's "having a wonderful time." More power to you, Martin!

Between inebriates, surprises and high kicking, the Shoreham Terrace floor show is away over on the astounding side. Fritz and Jean Hubert, recently at the Earle Theater, do an alcoholic act that's 150 proof, certainly one of the best of its type. Dancer Jeanne Kirk provides the high kicking. And don't get the idea that her black chiffon gown is really a nightie. It's what they call a "chemise evening dress." The Monacled Ambassadors beseech us not to tell the nature of their surprise act. But we will say that it's uplifting.

Frank Meyer, accordionist and pianist in Johnny Slaughter's Metronome Room Orchestra, has just become the proud papa of a baby girl. His chest expansion is up three inches, it's said. He doesn't wear a hat, so we could get no figures on head expansion.

Most stunning dance ensemble ever presented in a Capital floor show is the fan number now current on Al Norton's Lotus Revue. The girls wear white satin gowns, their fans are huge affairs of black ostrich. That's just basic material. What makes the act is the eerie thrill of the "Night and Day" music the involutions, convolutions, revolutions of the shifting patterns of midnight black, shining white and lovely faces.

Impromptu appearance of a sweet and talented little Chinese girl, Katherine Goon, brought a storm of applause at the Bamboo Gardens the other evening. Katherine was mighty oute in "Swingin,'" but "Music, Maestro, Please" gave more scope to her richly lovely young voice. She's star material.

High-pressure rhythms:

"Scat" singing by Duke Bieber, of Howard Tophan's Orchestra, at Show Boat, popular spot on the Baltimore Boulevard.

That sizzle of drums that accompanies Ken Reichard's "goodnight song" at Brinkley's and the zing and finality he puts into the last, "Well, it's good night!"

The complicated swing of the clever Sidney Orchestra playing on week-ends at Griffith Farms.

Peck-peck-peckin' all around: Countess de Bournet, Mayfair's official peerer-into-the-future, can tell your fortune just as well with the aid of cigarette smoke, a glass of water or a Tom Collins as she can with your palm or cards. But she has to remove the ice from the Tom Collins. Which doesn't do it any good.

It isn't romance that's putting that extra thrill into Bobby Simpson's singing in the Mayflower Lounge. He's just lost two wisdom teeth, is due to lose two more. Happy novocaining, Bobby!

Lou Berman is getting ready to spring some new ditties upon the unsuspecting patrons of the Rainbow Room. They're of what Lou calls the "higher type of music"—you know, in the "Isle of Debris" meter.

Hi Hat's Dick Reger is going to turn back the calendar to get novel. He's polishing up a flock of 80-year-old songs and putting them in swing rhythm. He got the idea from the success of "Ol' Man Mose."

Biggest man ever to set foot on the Glen Echo bandstand is Art Lund, singer with Little Joe Hart's Orchestra which returns to Echo next Tuesday, September 6. Art is 6 feet 6 inches tall, redheaded and a football player. Sounds like what the girl friends ordered.

Those Friday "Spot Prize Nights" at Pine Grove are full of pleasant surprises. Because you can eat and drink the prizes.

Miss Gaynor Is Now A Lovable Dumbbell

'Three Loves Has Nancy' Allows Her to Commit All but Mayhem; Tony Martin Meets 'Lucky Ladies Tomorrow.

By Gerald G. Gross,
Substituting for Nelson B. Bell.

JANET GAYNOR, over a screen career that has been much longer than her flashing eyes and trim little figure would indicate, has played many parts. She has been minx, coquette, tragedienne, even a singer and hoofer (remember "Sunny Side Up"?).

Now, in her first picture since "A Star Is Born," she is a small-town dumbbell, a sort of Dulcy with Southern accent. She does the wrong thing at the right time most beautifully, she makes nervous wrecks of two such estimable males as Franchot Tone and Robert Montgomery, not to mention Reginald Owen; she goes around uttering bromides which, if you had to listen to them in your home, would certainly drive you berserk.

And yet, heaven help us, she succeeds in being lovable, even though it is in a homicidal sort of way.

All this by way of telling that "Three Loves Has Nancy" was screened yesterday at the Fox Exchange, prior to its opening at Loew's Capitol on Friday. A review of same will appear in due course, but meantime I can't bite this off without shouting that here is an hilarious comedy, rendered more in the tradition of the stage than the cinema, into which the three principals fit perfectly.

Hear, hear! The first 1,000 women who come to the Earle tomorrow for the first show, beginning at 11 a. m., will be greeted in the lobby by Tony Martin, who will present each of them with an autographed photograph. Now headlining the vaudeville bill, the handsome singing star of pictures has proved a popular visitor in Washington. Tomorrow, incidentally, is the last day of the current show, "Boy Meets Girl" giving way to "Four's a Crowd" on Friday morning.

• • • •

City officials, civic leaders and businessmen of the community will attend tonight's ceremonies at the opening and dedication of the Atlas Theater, 1331 H street northeast. There will be no speeches, the entire program being devoted to entertainment.

"Love Finds Andy Hardy" is the inaugural attraction. An orchestra under direction of Leon Brusiloff will provide music for the occasion.

The new house is of the one-floor plan, seats 1,000 and incorporates the most advanced sound, projection and air-conditioning equipment. Not the least of its auxiliary conveniences is a nursery where children may be left to play under the supervision of a nurse while parents view the show.

"Hope you can come by and see it with us again, as we feel certain you will enjoy it," writes Frank La Falce, advertising and publicity director for the brothers Warner in this territory. His reference is to "King Kong" and its screening at 1:30 p. m. today. On Friday the gorilla enters the Metropolitan. Frank, among horrofantastic films "King Kong" occupies a cozy niche in my memory alongside "The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari," "The Invisible Man" and "Frankstein" and I shouldn't miss seeing it again for anything. I'll be there.

Whereupon in walked Kitty Pritchard with a handout that starts out: "Because it is the last production of their fifth season, the Roadsiders are determined that "Eugene Aram," which begins the final fortnight on Monday, September 5, will be the best of all."

It goes on to say that Director Anton Hardt is rehearsing the cast far into the night, Margaret (Bibi) Osterwald will sing 'Casey Jones" and other classics between the acts and that "Eugene Aram" is one of the most perfect melodramas ever written.

Leading roles will be played by Eugene Kressin, Betty Gray, Milton Freedman, Howard Wierum, Hugh Smythe, Leslie Crawford and Richard Walsh.

The Hitler crisis, hay fever, the baseball pennant races—all must take a back seat to a piece of real jitterbug news flashed to this desk by Rugers Neilson of RKO-Radio. He writes, so help us, that a couple has "Yammed" its way up Pike's Peak. One Bette Harrison and her partner, Roland Wilson, of Colorado Springs, climbed onto a specially built flat car and did the "Yam" all the way up to the summit. The stunt was staged, as if it were necessary to explain, in connection with the local showing of "Carefree."

In fewer words: Rosalind Russell has her first gum-chewing role in "Four's a Crowd," next at the Earle . . . "I was tired of playing Lady Mary," she says . . . "It was a little tiresome not being able to chew gum" "The Return of the Scarlet Pimpernel," sequel to the Leslie Howard starring picture, comes to the Little on Sunday . . . "Drums," previewed here Monday night, will open simultaneously at Radio City Music Hall and in Bombay on September 2 . . . Artie Shaw and his orchestra will play dance music for two cruises on the steamer Potomac Sunday night . . . Patsy Kelly, about 50 pounds lighter than when you saw her last, plays her "first truly romantic role" in "The Lady and the Cowboy" . . . The Mount Vernon Open Air Theater opens "Joy of Living" tomorrow night, starring Irene Dunne and Douglas Fairbanks, jr. . . . The Vagabond Players of Deale, Md., are rehearsing "Borderland," a frontier melodrama.

Eddy Picks Tunes For Concert Tour

Nelson Eddy, who makes a rule on his concert tours of singing hit songs from his pictures as encores to the regular program, already is planning to add three numbers on his next tour, which will not start until February.

During the past year, the three popular songs which have ben most in demand on the Eddy tours have been "Will You Remember?" from "Maytime," "In the Still of the Night," from "Rosalie," and "Who Are We to Say?" from "The Girl of the Golden West."

To these three Eddy is adding "Sweethearts," "Every Lover Must Meet His Fate" and "Pretty as a Picture," all from the Victor Herbert operetta, "Sweethearts," which Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is bringing to the screen with Jeannette MacDonald and Eddy as its costars.

Eddy predicts that the "Pretty as a Picture" number, with Herbert Stothart's modern orchestration, will be one of the outstanding tunes of the coming year.

Rainier Audience For Gravet Singing

Fernand Gravet sang to a very famous one-woman audience who sat on a sound stage floor to listen to him.

In the home sequence in "The Great Waltz," Gravet, as the Composer Strauss, sings his song "One Day When We Were Young." For two days Gravet was "kidded" about being elected to sing. Miss Rainier promised to "sit in the front row and hear him."

Cameras were lined up, microphones placed, orchestra assembled for the take. Miss Rainer arrived, went through the ring of cameras, microphone booms and lamps, chose a spot between two lamp tripods, sat on the floor to listen.

Gravet surprised the "kidders" with a very fine barytone voice. He had used it in several musicals in France, he disclosed after the song.

Wooden Shoes.

Jeanette MacDonald has to rehearse a wooden shoe dance for her new musical, "Sweethearts," costarring Nelson Eddy, for three hours every day. She will also do two other dances.

Paycheck Carrier Proves Film Find

When a treasurer's assistant brought Edwin L. Marin his paycheck on "The Chaser" set, the young man never returned to his office.

For the director cast him on the spot in the film. He is Jack McKinney, and he joins Denis O'Keefe, Ann Morriss, Lewis Stone, Lana Turner and Jack Mulhall.

'The Old Soak'

ARCH McDONALD, who needs no introduction to Washington radio listeners, is revealed as an actor of parts in the title role of the play now being presented at the Cross Roads Theater.

New Film at Earle Features This Quartet

PATRIC KNOWLES, OLIVIA DE HAVILLAND, ROSALIND RUSSELL, ERROL FLYNN. They are, respectively, a publisher, a spoiled heiress, a newspaper woman and a reporter-press agent in "Four's a Crowd," the romantic comedy which will succeed "Boy Meets Girl" at Warner Brothers Earle on Friday. Phil Harris and his orchestra will headline the stage bill.

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Aug. 30.—Had producers waited to see the new previews they could have saved that million dollars which they're now blowing in to impress on the public mind that movies are our greatest entertainment. They are that when we get such pictures as "You Can't Take It With You." They could offer a prize to anyone not entertained by it without one soul claiming it. It has something for every member of the family. It takes the banker back to his boyhood and the boy into the banker's office where, after watching frenzied finance, he is willing to go back to his job.

HEDDA HOPPER

If there's anything funnier than a woman becoming a novelist because a typewriter was delivered to her by mistake, it's using the family cat as a paper weight. Spring Byington plays her, and instead of being an addle-brain, she seems the most natural, cheery person you'd ever want to meet. Spring's performances are so good, you're apt to take them for granted.

The outstanding actor to me was Edward Arnold. His portrait of the banker is like a sinister Frankenstein—yet you feel sorry for him. He pays $10,000 a year to his doctor, but is never without bicarbonate of soda in his hand. I know three New York men who see their doctors every day and do the same thing. Lionel Barrymore, Jimmy Stewart, Jean Arthur, Mischa Auer, Donald Meek and Harry Davenport as the judge were superb in their reality.

While 650 newspaper correspondents cheered Frank Capra's most entertaining picture, "You Can't Take It With You," Frank was living a chapter of real life . . . you "can't keep him with you." And we mourned with him over the loss of his little son.

England gave us something to worry about when they showed us their breath-taking Technicolor picture, "Drums." While Capra built for laughs, they were rebuilding an empire, showing their armies wending their way through narrow passes of the Himalayas of northern India.

I heard a few grumble that the picture wasn't dramatic enough. They seem to lose sight of the fact that the Briish in a crisis are not dramatic but cool and collected. Empires aren't built on emotion—but clear heads, sturdy hearts and a willingness to make the greatest sacrifice without heroics or false sentimentality.

It's interesting to note that Valerie Hobson, Raymond Massey and Francis Sullivan, three of the leads, were under contract to our Universal Studios and yet few seem to have remembered them. Valerie Hobson did 11 pictures for Universal in two years. None of them noteworthy.

Sabu, the little Indian boy, found by Robert Flaherty in the elephant stables of a Maharajah, now speaks English like a native. Monta Bell, who met him first in India, said Sabu used to entertain his friends in London by winding and rewinding his turban. The king was wiped off the front page of the British papers the day Sabu rode his elephant through winding streets of London. He nearly got caught in Threadneedle street. He's quite a lad. Both RKO and Sam Goldwyn are hot after him to bring him over here.

The third picture which drew raves was "Carefree." Did you ever see a dream walking? In this you see Fred and Ginger dream dancing in slow motion—yet it's the nearest thing to flying mere mortals will ever come to. Fred's golf dance left me breathless, and for those of us who can't even hit a ball, we'll be eaten up with jealousy when we see his grace, precision and drives.

Each time I see these two together I think: "This is the end, they can't top this one." But by heck they do. Since going dramatic Ginger has improved her comedy technique 100 per cent. I don't think anyone could do it better. Her clothes on the whole were mostly becoming, except one little number. Looked like the receiving end of a dart contest—wore a heart and arrows on her chest.

It was refreshing to hear every dance applauded. And nice to know that Franklin Pangborn has come into his own. Gets a hand on his entrance. Yes, Mark Sandrich made his last picture at RKO in a blaze of glory.

Turned away from the preview was the rambling reporter, Cornelius Vanderbilt, jr. He may be a big shot on Fifth avenue and in Newport, but here he's just another tourist trying to crash the gate—without success.

Changes Roles.

Janet Gaynor has definitely departed from the sweet girl roles which marked her early years on the screen. She portrays an ultra-modern, sophisticated girl in "Three Loves Has Nancy."

Harmonica Fan.

Myrna Loy prefers Borrah Minevitch's harmonica records between scenes.

Thiele to Direct Comedy of Youth

To William Thiele falls the assignment to direct Freddie Bartholomew and Judy Garland in their first appearance as brother and sister. He has been chosen to direct "Listen Darling," Katharine Brush's story of two children who set out to choose a stepfather and promote his marriage to their widowed mother. Mary Astor plays the subject of their match-making experiment. Walter Pidgeon is the stepfather.

Miss Lombard Holds Fast to Her Tax Story

Convinces Othman That She Pays 85½%; 'Woman in Black.'

By Frederick C. Othman.

Hollywood, Aug. 30 (U.P.).—With a portion of this Nation's public accountants, plus the press agent for the Hollywood Cemetery, plus an estimated 1,000,000 hoboes on our trail today, we haven't time to write a movie column.

We're in a hurry to find a safe place, preferably a desert island, and all we can do is drop off this dispatch as a red herring to confuse our pursuers.

First there's the little matter of Carole Lombard's $465,000 annual income and the tax she pays thereon. That's what the accountants are angry about, by mail, telegraph, and personal call. We tried to sooth with a drink the one that called, but he still insisted we didn't know as much about figures as a dress designer.

What happened was that we had a talk last week with La Lombard and then wrote a yarn about how she paid 85½ per cent of her 1937 income in State and Federal taxes. The experts from Washington, Pittsburgh and many another spot besieged us with complaints. The gist of their story was that nobody, not even the lovely Lombard, could pay that much money in income taxes.

Caroll Figures It Up.

So out we hastened to Selznick International Studios for another confab with Miss L., who incidentally is one of our favorite people, even though she does give the Government practically everything she earns. She got out pencil and paper and figured:

1. That she gave 65 per cent of her $645,000 to the Federal Government in income taxes.
2. That she gave the State 12 per cent in its income taxes.
3. That she gave assorted other tax collectors 8½ per cent, mostly for personal levies.

That adds up to 85½ per cent, all right, and all we wish is that the experts would take their complaints up with Miss Lombard instead of with us. She can take it; we can't.

Hardly had we got the tax thing straightened out before we learned to our everlasting amazement that in Hollywood even the cemeteries have press agents. We'd written an item, spoofing the legend about the mysterious woman in black who goes to Rudolph Valentino's crypt on each anniversary of his death.

A Phoney Mourner.

Up popped the press agent for the Hollywood cemetery with the mysterious woman in black, herself in person, the same one whose pictures appeared in newspapers all over the land last week.

She identified herself as Miss Bonnie Bell, of New York City, here on a visit. Miss Bell said she had read so much about the mysterious woman that she got her boy friend to dress as a chauffeur, borrowed her aunt's automobile, and drove to the cemetery in style. The photographers welcomed her with open arms and many a flashlight bulb.

"I did it just as a gag," confessed Miss Bell. "I really tried to get half a dozen of my friends to appear in black, too, and sort of confound the photographers, but I guess there wasn't enough time. I'm sorry I did it now; it seemed funnier at the time."

Miss Bell's statement did confound the press agent, but he promised to locate the original woman in black shortly. When, as, and if he does, we'll report the facts here, provided "we're still in the land of the living."

Stars Send Novice First Fan Letter

It's a thrill for a newcomer to receive her first fan letter, but Ann Morriss got a triple thrill because her first fan letter came from the stars.

A Dallas (Tex.) girl, Miss Morriss is making her screen debut opposite Dennis O'Keefe in "The Chaser." The fan mail boy arrived on the set and presented her with the letter. It was signed by Clark Gable, Myrna Loy, Jeannette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy, Eleanor Powel and Luise Rainer. It contained greetings and a warm welcome.

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, Aug. 30.

THOMAS E. DEWEY: Isn't it true that Dixie Davis, in spilling his story, revealed all details of the Jules Martin murder? If he's implicated himself, how can you square the rap up at Albany County? . . . Charles Grimes: Bernard Hershkopf, who was associated with Kresel, now is the law expert for Hines' defense force, replacing Prof. Maurice Wormser. . . .

• • • •

F. D. R.: The all-time attendance record you recently established in Texas was broken last week. The act which drew more people than did the President of the United States was Edgar Bergen and Charles McCarthy.

• • • •

Stalin: Last week's report here was that you will send your daughter to school in America and that her guardian will be Princess Catherine Radziwill. . . . Police Commissioner Valentine: Your jewelry squad worked all the swank cafes this past week-end, because the time is ripe for another cafe jewel robbery. . . . Norma Talmadge: One of the backers of the new Jessel-Yokel theatrical enterprise is William K. Howard, the film producer. . . . David Sarnoff: Max Reinhardt, the impresario, is turning to radio. Texaco probably will sponsor his program.

• • • •

FATHER DIVINE: Arthur Boran, the mimic, will imitate your voice for the new movie being screened about your activities. . . . Maxwell Anderson: Walter Huston just came to town. He confided that he'll appear in your new play. . . .

• • • •

GROVER WHALEN: Jim Farley won't issue a complete set of New York World's Fair stamps. He'll limit the special issue to 1, 3 and 5 cent stamps. The Frisco Exposition will be honored with a 2-cent stamp. . . . Robert Irwin: General Sessions Judge Wallace, who presided at the recent trial at which Sam Leibowitz's client was sentenced to the chair, is expected to be the jurist who will preside in your case.

• • • •

BENIAMINO GIGLI: Nino Martini will keep you company—out of the Met this season. He and the Metropolitan Opera officials couldn't agree on terms. . . . Dwight Wiman: Jimmy Durante just decided that he will be unable to appear in your new J. P. McEvoy show. . . . Norma Shearer: What's the big secret—which necessitated two days of conferences at your lawyer's office last week? . . .

• • • •

HARRY HOPKINS: The angel for the movie production of WPA's ". . . one-third of a nation . . ." is said to Floyd Odlum, the Wall Street and movie official.

• • • •

HARPO MARX: When Ezra Stone, of "What a Life," was introduced to your brother Groucho, he pushed Ezra away and shrieked: "If you're a 'Dead End' boy, wait'll I get my 10-foot pole." . . . Ted Lewis: Congratulations to you and the others—Jim Barton, Cardini, Al Trahan, Patricia Ellis, Tip Tap & Toe et al.—for the new show at the Casa Manana. You've made it the best show on Broadway.

• • • •

CLARK GABLE: Your agent soon will tell you that your new leading lady will be Mae West. The picture will be "New Orleans." . . . George Weinberg: If you're still confused with regard to the recent dates when you met Dixie Davis—and the latter's visits to Hope Dare—perhaps this will help: On May 28 I reported that "Dixie Davis was leaving the Tombs, not in connection with his alleged toothache." And on June 2: "Dixie Davis is telling his story to the district attorney." . . .

• • • •

SYLVIA SIDNEY: If you agree to appear in "Hometown," the movie to be produced in the East, then your leading man will be Robert Montgomery.

History Theme Demands Many Film Costumes

Popularity of costume pictures and films with huge casts has brought new prosperity to the wardrobe business in Hollywood during the past six months.

A summary of production schedules today on ten of the largest pictures ever produced in the film city and on 35 miscellaneous features and shorts disclosed a total output of nearly 50,000 costumes.

This estimate was made by the Western Costume Co., the largest in the world, which does the bulk of Hollywood's clothing business. The estimate includes the costumes made by the various studios and those made by Western and other houses.

Leading the list is Paramount with five big pictures. "The Texans," starring Joan Bennett and Randolph Scott, used 1,500 Civil War and Western costumes of that period.

Aviation outfits and Alaskan apparel patterned after those worn between 1900 and the present day for "Men and Wings" and "Spawn of the North," total more than 1,400.

The Frank Lloyd epic, "If I Were King," is using 3,000 medieval French gowns, robes, tights, armored, court, street and beggar costumes. Ronald Colman and Frances Dee, stars of the picture, each wears 20 different changes.

For "Paris Honeymoon," Director Frank Tuttle selected 1,200 Balkan things. Bing Crosby and Franciska Gaal will be seen wearing authentic dresses of southern Europe.

A total of 200 seamstresses has worked on these garments since January, in addition to those rented.

For "Marie Antoinette," Western and MGM wardrobe supplied 3,500 raiments of the French revolution period.

"Wild Bill Hickok" at Columbia is taking 2,500 Western clothes of the pioneer type, 1,500 have been outfitted at RKO for "Mother Carey's Chickens," and 35 additional pictures with an average of 200 characters each are keeping the film tailors working in three shifts.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Should Bride Continue in Job Which Would Mean Living With Her Family, Away From Her Husband?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a school teacher by profession and was married in June to a man who makes a good salary. We are very happy together. But here is the problem—when I got married, I didn't give up my contract, as there was a possibility of my husband's being transferred to a place near our home town, where I had been teaching. Had that been the case, I would have continued to teach.

• • • •

However, my husband has just learned that he will not be transferred for the present, and the town where I had taught is about 250 miles from here. Up to now, we haven't set up housekeeping and had been taking our meals out, which was in the nature of an enjoyable summer's vacation for me. For the fall, we have taken an apartment with a kitchen, and the time has come for making some definite plans.

• • • •

I have tentatively suggested to my husband that it might be wise if I were to continue teaching anyway. I said I could get down to Washington occasionally and he could come to see me on week-ends and holidays. He is against the idea; says he wouldn't hear of such a thing. He says my place is with him and that even though my teacher's salary would be a good one, we would be spending it on the telephone and railroad companies, instead of saving it for ourselves.

• • • •

If I were to go back to teach, I suppose I would live with my folks. Up until the time I got married, I always paid the rent. Financial conditions aren't so good at home, which also bothers me. I have two sisters, one married—who helps out. Dad isn't well and doesn't do very much. Mother tells me, in a letter, that I should weigh the problem very seriously before resigning my job. She says that in urging this, she is thinking of my good, not her benefit. Yet I sort of feel that she is really thinking of what I would thus be able to contribute to the family, at least for another year—after which things might take a turn for the better for them.

• • • •

If only she would write and tell me that I should give up my job; that my place is with my husband; that they will manage somehow; then I probably wouldn't feel so badly about giving up my teaching job. Instead of feeling eager to give it up and looking forward happily to staying here with my husband, I feel sad about it all. To teach for another year would be grand, but then there is that saying: "You can't have your cake and eat it, too."

• • • •

I don't know what to do. It's a grand job. But it would mean being away from my husband, living at home, helping the family, and at the same time trying to save something for ourselves. What is the best thing for me to do? School opens shortly after Labor Day and I must reach a decision immediately. Can you let me know by September 1?

PUZZLED.

Woman's First Alligiance.

DEAR PUZZLED: In my opinion, your mother is trespassing on forbidden ground in attempting in any way to influence your decision in this instance. Moreover, her suggestion that you "should weigh the problem very seriously before resigning (your) job," amounts to innuendo rather than logical argument, and leads one to concur in your belief that (aside from meddling) she is, actually, more concerned about the welfare of her own immediate family group than she is with your happiness and the success of your marriage.

• • • •

I cannot believe that any intelligent and truly unselfish mother could suppose she was serving her newly married daughter's best interests in influencing that daughter to run contrary to her husband's wishes, in the matter of reaching a decision that is bound to have a vital bearing on their domestic set-up. A wife owes her first allegiance to her husband, and she is doing a man a grave injustice in marrying him if she is not prepared to concede him this just and simple due.

• • • •

A wife's first business is to make a success of her marriage; and in 99 cases out of 100 (in cases, let us say, where the average woman is dealing with the average man), her first step in the direction of success must be that of cheerfully following her husband's lead when important matters are to be decided.

And I can think of no more important decision, in the first year of marriage, than that which would determine their voluntarily being together or being apart.

• • • •

The first year of marriage is something of a trial balloon in the best of circumstances. Individual differences of personality, habit, preference and temperament should be adjusted with patience and skill during that year, if the partnership is to settle down to a sturdy basis of harmonious and efficient team work. It is a task calling for the wife's whole wit, wisdom, strength and diplomacy, if she is to substantiate her husband's original theory that he had chosen for himself the best of all possible mates. It is her business to uproot all seedlings of discord as fast as they appear—and nothing is so prolific of marital discord as a husband's aggrieved and astonished conclusion (based on real or fancied ground) that his wife is either headstrong, indifferent to his wishes, skeptical of his judgments, overly independent or divided in her allegiance to him or to their marriage.

• • • •

Supposing you were to ignore or override your husband's objections and return to your teaching post for another year, I feel you would stand to profit little and to lose much that could never be retrieved or duplicated. Your husband's ability and willingness to finance the marriage unaided; his splendid, old-fashioned theory that "a wife's place is with her husband," and his sincerely felt and frankly stated desire for and need of your constant companionship, are precious attitudes to be appreciated and encouraged.

• • • •

To dismiss them as attitudes of small importance, or to take them for granted through failing to adapt yourself to them, might bring you in the end to the discovery that he has done a surprising bout-face and was adapting himself, instead (to your sharp disappointment), to the theory that your earnings were useful to the point of being indispensable; that there were other women who could, if occasion demanded, suffice as a social companion in the place of the wife who was elsewhere, and that he no longer either desired or depended upon your companionship to the degree that he once did.

• • • •

Since the matter of your teaching was not brought to issue, as having any special bearing on your marriage, until it developed that it would entail prolonged periods of separation between husband and wife, I take it that your husband is not opposed, on principle, to your having a job; that he is not, in other words, dictatorial and unreasonable; but rather that, as between wifehood and teaching for you, he pleads the greater importance of the former, when a choice must be made—as I think it undoubtedly will have to be made here.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

First Aid to Elegance—The New High Coiffure

Coiffures by Antoine.

IT IS the style again to be elegant. Not naive, nor coquettish, nor shocking, nor advanced—but to possess that intangible feminine grace that was once associated with the word "lady." Consequently women of this modern era are looking for some short-cuts to this new personality. One of the first aids, says Antoine, noted hair stylist of Paris, is the high coiffure. Antoine has long maintained that elegance was the greatest distinction any woman could possess, and he has urged women to cultivate this grace both in their personalities and their attire. He points out that the upswept coiffure helps in achieving this effect because it gives dignity and femininity to women and also offers them wider opportunity for individual hair dress. Stereotyped coiffures, he points out, are never elegant. In the photographs above are shown two of Antoine's versions of the high coiffure. The one at the left demonstrates a simple arrangement by means of rolls which could be easily kept and which would be suitable for both daytime and evening. At right a patrician and feminine effect is achieved by massing a profusion of small sleek curls on top of the head.

Style Dummies Provide Lessons In Lines, Posture

Svelte Figures in Windows Copied From Live Models.

By Ida Jean Kain.

DID YOU ever peek around in back of one of those svelte window mannequins? There's a tuck right smack down the back of her dress to make it fit!

When I saw those tucks, I thought "Ah-ha! Those figures aren't human!" And so I went over to Cora Scovil's to get the lowdown on dummy designing. Mrs. Scovil makes the fashion figures which appear in smart shops the world over, and I knew she could tell me all about them.

You know what I found out? Those dummies whose figures we envy are created purposely with the hips smaller than the bust measurement! And they're at least inches taller than the average woman. Here is a sample set of measurements: Bust, 34 inches; waist, 25 inches; hips, 33½ inches.

Exaggeration Necessary.

Although the figures are designed from live models with perfect measurements, Mrs. Scovil explains that the exaggerations in height and slimness are necessary in order to keep the window mannequins in perspective . . . "If they were exactly the size and shape of the average woman they would look like the old dressmaker form up in the attic—and women would laught at them!" Hence the hips half an inch smaller than the bust measurement, the waistline 11 inches smaller!

While these measurements are exaggerated, they are only slightly more streamlined than the perfect figure. The less difference there is between your hipline and your bust measurement, and the tinier you waistline is, the better your proportion. And as to the height exaggeration which makes the figures appear slimmer, you can add inches to your own height and make yourself appear slimmer by standing tall and in lovely posture. You see . . . those dummies can teach us a lot!

Posture, by the way, is considered even more important than perfect measurements. This famous designer says that when one of her models does not have perfect measurements, it is possible to idealize her figure in creating the mannequin, but "When the posture is bad nobody can tell a thing about the figure!"

Few Posture Perfect.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Aug. 30.

EVERY YEAR there is a favorite chorus girl on what is left of Broadway. Her face is in the papers, and usually her figure. Cameramen, playboys, calf-love college lads, reporters and the usual run of everyday chasers seek her out. She has her mad and merry hour in the spotlight, then she usually marries well and is forgotten. A new dream girl bursts upon that mazda-maddened Coney Island of streets. At the moment the daughter of fortune is named Jackie Gateley, and is probably the cutest native of Danville, Yell County, Ark.

ALICE HUGHES.

This child of the hour was christened Odith, which was as close to a beloved lost sister named Edith as her parents could come. After all, what's a mere vowel? Then, of course, it became "Jacqueline" for show business purposes, and when she was living in Forth Worth, Tex., that Belasco of the Merry-Merry, Mr. Billy Rose, engaged her to support the Bernhardt of the Bubble-Dance, Miss Sally Rand. With 13 other girls, La Gateley toured the Nation with Miss Rand's troupe, wearing some clothes, as she and her mother are careful to point out. And here she is, displaying her girlish beauty at the Paradise Night Club, and getting more newspaper space than any other chorine in town. She and her mamma live on upper Broadway, far from the honky-tonk.

• • • •

She's a small item, no more than 5 feet 3, and weighing 105. She speaks freely, in a high voice that reminds one of boop-a-doop Helen Kane, and when she tells reporters that she was champ hog-caller of Yell County, they go extra mad with delight. I wonder if she ever really saw a razorback. Obviously, Jackie neither smokes nor drinks. They never do. Her mother has ideas, as well.

• • • •

One lad asked if European lads made more passes than the native breed, for her chick has worked in London and on the Riviera. "I believe they do," said Jack. "It is more of a matter of course with them, over there."

"That's not nice for the paper!" chided mamma. Jackie's today's big number. Cute, too. Next, please?

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Latest literary news, or rumor. The Countess von Haugwitz Reventlow (Babs to you), having peddled the late Mdivani's pet gondola, is now chumming with Miss Elsa Maxwell, the jill of all trades, at the Lido Venice, and is said to be planning to do her life and tough times with that rotund party-hurer. All of which is calculated to bring on the most acute attack reader apathy since the dawn of recorded history. The girl's life story has been printed in the newspapers 3,197 times, and what Elsa can do to glam it up I can't imagine . . .

Newest frozen tidbit to appear here is "blueberry ice cream," very pretty to see and tasty to taste.

Wash five medium-sized tomatoes. Remove cores, inside pulp and seeds. Stuff with the following combined ingredients: 1 cup of soft bread crumbs, ½ cup of diced cooked celery, 2 tablespoons minced onions, 1 cup of melted butter and 3 tablespoons cream. Set the stuffed tomatoes upright in a shallow pan in which half an inch of boiling water has been placed. Bake for 30 minutes, basting occasionally. Top with cheese crowns: Melt 2 tablespoons of butter in a double boiler. Add 3 tablespoons of flour and mix well. Add 1 cup of milk. Cook slowly and stir frequently until a thick sauce forms. Add ¼ teaspoon of salt, ⅛ teaspoon of pepper, ⅛ teaspoon celery seed and 1-3 cup of grated cheese and cook for two minutes. Add 1 beaten egg yolk. Mix well and serve on top of tomatoes.

Pale Green Gains On Blue and Pink As Lingerie Tint

Paris (U.P.).—Pastel tints reign supreme in the lingerie world today as yesterday, despite a few successful attempts to introduce bordeaux reds, browns and brilliant blues. But it is well to note that pale green is rapidly gaining on pink and blue in the color race. Often more flattering to certain types of complexion, the soft green tints are in any case a welcome relief from "baby" colors.

This idea of getting away from lingerie triteness and yet retaining a dainty feminism is even better illustrated by the ever-increasing use of floral prints for underwear. Huge tangerine poppies on a field of white chiffon make a nightie that has a dash of gaiety with its daintiness.

Fine lace can be used to advantage. Without really fine lace, lingerie is smarter if it is neatly tailored or trimmed with tiny handstitched tucks.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Smallpox Remains Menace.

WE POINTED out yesterday the fundamental necessity of diphtheria immunization for every child entering school for the first time. Parents may neglect this in infancy, or feel that the child is too young to have these treatments, but when the school age comes along, all such procrastinations should come to an end.

What other immunizations should be made at this period? Well, it hardly seems that it should be necessary to speak of smallpox vaccination again, but apparently it is. We have been lulled to security about smallpox because the practice of vaccination almost drove it like diphtheria from the modern world, and parents are not as strict about having vaccination done as they were in my day.

But contagious diseases sleep; they do not die. Smallpox still exists around and about. Every once in a while little epidemics break out here and there. And it is estimated today that the numerical ratio of the unvaccinated population would result in a very serious situation if an epidemic of smallpox were to start in the United States.

From such a menace your children should be protected by vaccination.

Incidentally, re-vaccination should be done every seven years for about three times—that is to say the first vaccination should be made during the first year, then re-vaccination at 7, 14 and 21 years. After that immunity is supposed to be complete.

Atlantic Liners Bring Notables Back in Droves

Mrs. R. H. Dunlap, Returning on Normandie, Stops at Ritz-Carlton and Will Come to Washington After Sojourn in Newport.

By Dudley Harmon.

The income on transatlantic liners, as far as passengers are concerned, is finally beginning to equal the outgo, as one more summer draws to a close. Social and political notables are daily returning in droves from vacation weeks spent in European capitals, Hungarian shooting lodges, or seashore and health resorts.

One of Washington's most energetic women, Mrs. R. H. Dunlap, landed in New York earlier in the week on the Normandie and is stopping at the Ritz-Carlton. She will leave shortly for a visit with Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe at Berry Hill, their Newport place, and then will go to New Hampshire before returning to Washington the first part of October. Like Mr. and Mrs. Howe, who, incidentally, have become legal residents of Newport, Mrs. Dunlap is very much interested in music and is always a hard worker in campaigns for the National Symphony Orchestra.

Mrs. Dunlap is the author of two novels, "Encore for Love" and "Lady Be Good," the latter published last winter. The setting for the first is, under another name, Mrs. Dunlap's home in France, the Chateau de Coulennes in the Department of the Sarthe. She wrote the greater part of both her books there, where she usually spends her summers.

Others joining the trek home from Europe shortly will include Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse, who are expected to dock in New York on the liner Washington about September 15. They were accompanied on their travels by Mrs. Shouse's sub-debutante daughter, Miss Joan Dodd, a student at Concord Academy in Concord, Mass., and her son, William Dodd.

Messersmiths Entertain Guests

Not everybody is leaving town for Labor Day. The Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. George Messersmith will be at their Georgetown home and have with them the latter's mother, Mrs. Louis W. Mustard, of Wellesley Hills, Mass., and sister, Mrs. Lee Fraser, of New York. The visitors will be here for a week or ten days. Earlier in the summer the Messersmiths stayed with Mrs. Mustard and her son, Louis Mustard, jr., at their summer home on Cape Cod.

Members of the British Embassy staff seem to be still in Washington almost in toto. A delegation of them witnessed the premier the other evening of the new Alexander Korda movie "Drums," the locale of which is India and which is very, very British indeed. In a party together were the Counselor of the Embassy, Victor Mallet; the Third Secretary and pretty Mrs. Anthony Rumbold, the latter wearing a short white jacket over her navy blue frock; and Angus Malcolm, who recently arrived to take the post vacated last spring by Michael Vyvyan, who left diplomacy for a professorship at Cambridge.

Elsa Maxwell Tells All About Barbara

Elsa Maxwell must have leaped for pen and paper as soon as the Barbara Hutton divorce fracas started early in the summer, as appearing in the October issue of a national magazine is an article in which the girl with millions is analyzed by the famous fun-maker. According to a release on the article, Miss Maxwell says that when Barbara came of age and took possession of her fortune of forty-odd million dollars she gave away 11 of these millions before her advisers could stop her. On the day of attaining her majority she presented her father with five millions as an expression of gratitude for his trusteeship. The other six millions, according to the release, went to charity and friends.

Luncheon will be served starting at 12:30 p. m., and the afternoon business session will take place at 2 p. m. A formal conference dinner and dance will begin at 7 o'clock that evening.

On Sunday, the members will go to the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception at Catholic University to hear low mass. This will be followed by a boat trip down the Potomac on a chartered yacht, the S. S. Southport, and luncheon will be served on board ship. At 6 p. m., the final "formal banquet" will take place at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Over 200 clubs, called Newman Clubs after Cardinal John Henry Newman, will participate at the conference. The 12 provinces which compose the federation are New England, Middle Atlantic, Southern, Central New York, Allegheny, Southeast, Ohio Valley, Gulf States, Intermountain, Southwest and Canadian.

Thomas W. Dobson, of George Washington's Newman Club, is the general chanrman for the conference. The officers of the federation for this year are, president, John V. Kingston, of Elmhurst, Long Island, N. Y.; vice president, Miss Margaret Mary Downey, of West Roxbury, Mass.; treasurer, John Sullivan, of Laramie, Wyo.; recording secretary, Miss Regina F. King, of Philadelphia; corresponding secretary, John L. Ricketts, also of Philadelphia, and chaplain, the Rev. Paul A. Deery, of Bloomington, Ind.

Finance Committee Dinner Set Tonight By Zeta Tau Alpha

The Washington Alumnae Chapter of Zeta Tau Alpha, International Panhellenic Fraternity, will have a dinner tonight at 6:30 at Tilden Gardens, in honor of its national finance committee, which is meeting in Washington this week. Members of Beta Alpha Chapter at George Washington University are co-operating in the dinner, and members of the fraternity in Washington are urged to attend.

The members of the national finance committee, who are to be the guests of honor, are Mrs. John Conley, chairman; Mrs. Albert Hillix, who is former national president of Zeta Tau Alpha, and Miss Beatrice Clephane of this city.

Mrs. John Ford, president of the Washington Alumnae Chapter, is in charge of arrangements. Assisting her are Mrs. Franklin Steinko and Mrs. F. Eugene Seitz.

Meeting Attracts D. C. Daughters

Several officers and members of the Department of the Potomac, Woman's Relief Corps, will leave on Saturday for Des Moines, Iowa, where from September 4 to 9 they will attend their fifty-sixth national convention. The national president, Elizabeth L. Kothe, will be the presiding officer at the meetings, which will be held simultaneously with the seventy-second national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic at Des Moines.

Those of the Relief Corps who will go from Washington to be present at the convention are Mrs. Bertha B. Brown, department president; Mrs. Delia L. O'Brien, department secretary and past national senior vice president; Miss Mary A. Howarth, past department president; Mrs. Hattie Usry, delegate-at-large; Mrs. Katherine F. Winkelman, delegate; Miss Etta Moore, past department senior vice president and Mrs. Margaret Bradt and Mrs. Cora Dorsey, both of Phil Sheridan Womans Relief Corps.

Mrs. Bradt, who will attend the pioneer luncheon which is held annually for those having a membership of 25 years and over, will wear a silk dress which once belonged to the wife of Andrew Jackson.

On Monday, Mrs. Kothe and the past national presidents will tender a dinner to the Grand Army's national commander in chief, Dr. Overton H. Mennet. Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, Veterans' administrator, will be one of the guests.

On the day preceding, memorial exercises will be held for all deceased members of the Grand Army and will take place in the Shrine Temple in Des Moines. Then on Wednesday the Civil War veterans will parade through the streets with the Sons of Union Veterans as bodyguard. The Spanish War Veterans and the American Legion will also participate.

The Marine Band will give a program at the reception in honor of the commander in chief at the State capitol.

Bedtime Stories

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Teeny Weeny's Short-Tailed Cousin.

Who lives too much alone will end
By finding none to call him friend.
—Old Mother Nature.

Miner the Mole.

Tommy, Sue and Sammy had watched the Old Naturalist tip Teeny Weeny the Shrew from the pickle jar in which he had been a prisoner over night. Just there the ground was carpeted with dead leaves. Teeny Weeny vanished as if by magic. Had the ground opened and swallowed him he couldn't have disappeared from sight more quickly or completely. He simply darted under the leaves and then burrowed along beneath them. Once or twice there was just a slight movement of leaves a short distance away which might or might not have been caused by him.

"What does he do in winter? Does he sleep like Johnny Chuck?" Sue asked.

"No," replied the Old Naturalist. "He is just as active in winter as in summer. He burrows about under the snow just as he burrows around under the leaves now."

"But think of his tremendous appetite!" cried Sue. "How can he ever find enough to eat in winter? He just can't."

"But he just does," smiled the Old Naturalist "You know there are insects wintering over in all sorts of sheltered places There are chrysalids and cocoons hidden away under brush and bark and leaves and stones, more than you have any idea of. The Little One hunts for these things day and night and he finds them. Probably he finds a dead animal or bird now and then and that helps a lot. While he is generally supposed to live wholly on animal matter such as worms and insects and meat there are some naturalists who think it is not unlikely that, in winter at any rate, he eats some vegetable matter such as nuts and seeds. Anyway he lives. These tiny Shrews are found way up in the Arctic regions and sometimes travel long distances under the snow. Look yonder, but keep still!"

He pointed to where the carpet of leaves was being lightly lifted as if something was working its way along beneath. Of course, they thought it must be Teeny Weeny. Then, just for a moment the worker beneath the leaves appeared in a small space of bare ground crossed it and burrowed under the leaves on the other side.

"Miner the Mole," exclaimed Sue and Sammy together.

The Old Naturalist shook his head. "Wrong," said he. "That was a Shrew."

"But it was a lot bigger than Teeny Weeny," Sue protested.

"So it was, my dear. So it was," replied the Old Naturalist. "You see it was a different kind of Shrew. It was the Littlest One's short-tail cousin. It looks somewhat like a Mole at first glance and some people call it the Mole-shrew. Short-tailed Shrew is the better name. Short-tail is quite a bit bigger than Teeny Weeny, stout, more nearly the size of Danny Meadow Mouse. If you could feel of the fur you would find it soft, very much like that of a Mole. Teeny Weeny does all of his running about on the ground, but Short-tail often digs tunnels of his own close to the surface and uses the tunnels and runways of others."

"The first one I ever saw was brought in by Black Pussy. At first I thought it was a small Mole," contributed Tommy. "When I looked at the front feet I knew better."

"What about the front feet?" Sammy wanted to know.

"A Mole's are big and broad for digging and sweeping the earth back behind him, but a Shrew's front feet are not that way at all, but small, more like you would expect them to be," Tommy replied.

The Old Naturalist nooded agreement. "There are no front feet or hands like those of Miner the Mole, so there is no excuse for ever mistaking any other animal for him," said he.

"I suppose Short-tail lives on much the same food as Teeny Weeny," said Sue.

"Yes," was the reply. "And he is just about as short on temper, scrappy and large on appetite. In a fight a big Mouse doesn't stand half a chance against Short-tail despite the fact that the latter is practically blind. I suspect that in the course of its life a Short-tail Shrew kills and dines on a good many Mice. It probably is well for man that this is so. You know Rats and Mice do more damage, and are more costly to man, than all other animals combined."

Nazi Press Hits Czechs; Move Recalls Austria

Large Headlines Record Every Brawl; Describe 'Bloody Terror.'

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Aug. 30.—Large headlines in the German newspapers today recorded every tavern brawl in Czechoslovakia, invariably representing the Czechs as ruthless aggressors.

The press campaign coincided with an approach to a state of preparedness for war in the air, on land and on sea that was unprecedented since the World War.

Newspaper headlines were in sharp contrast to the restrained language of the semiofficial mouthpiece of the foreign office, Diplomatische Politische Korrespondenz, which yesterday asserted a "latent crisis is threatening to become acute."

So far there had been no concrete evidence that the Sudeten Germans in Czechoslovakia were using the authority given them in a party announcement to hit back when attacked, despite the stories of Czech "atrocities."

Recalls Austrian Crisis.

The situation in many respects recalled that prevailing in Austria when the Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg system was under fire in dispatches to the German press.

The papers then represented the Austrian people as in a white heat of indignation, leading many Nazis to declare, "Germany must intervene to establish order."

A report of a knife fight in which two Sudeten Germans were wounded in a Czechoslovak village appeared today with the caption, "Czechs besiege Sudeten village—gendarmerie vainly asks military assistance."

The organ of Minister of Propaganda Goebbels began the same story with the words:

"From all parts of Sudeten land come alarming reports of bloody and violent Czech methods. Like a pall of bloody terror villainous deeds of the unbridled mob oppress the tortured land."

DNB, German official news agency, and special reports from Gabersdorf, near Trautenau, charged "Czech road building gangs brought into the Sudeten region to erect fortifications banded themselves into shock brigades which go rampaging through German villages looting and maltreating the population."

"Bloody terror by shock brigades—Czech mob rages through tormented country," said another headline.

"The Sudetens' patience and discipline is being sorely tried," the dispatches said, adding that complaints were being laid before the Prague authorities and Viscount Runciman, British mediator.

Another story from Horaitz, in the Saaz district, said a Czech boy stabbed a German boy in the thigh and that "German school children are habitually chased and insulted as 'Henlein's swine' by Czechs, although the town is two-thirds German."

In the meantime Hitler spent his fourth consecutive day of hurrying from fortification to fortification along the French and Swiss frontiers, his movements so carefully guarded that no details of his itinerary were divulged.

Discharges Delayed.

The army was involved in sectional maneuvers for regular and reserve units. It is estimated that when the peak of these joint operations is reached before the middle of September Germany will have put between 500,000 and 1,000,000 men under arms.

Conscripts who now are undergoing their first two-year training period and who will have served their two years by September 30 have been notified they must remain with the colors at least during October.

Berlin families with sons in the army received letters saying their sons would not be discharged until the last days of October and "maybe later."

Foreign military observers expressed the opinion Germany wished to keep the outgoing class under arms until the new class starts training November 1—thus keeping as many soldiers as possible under arms during the present friction in German-Czechoslovak relations.

The rebuilt navy was showing feverish activity. It embarked last Friday on a series of sectional maneuvers in the North Sea which may last until the middle of September. The navy ministry described the exercises as "routine," but did not divulge the number of participating units.

The air force was keyed up in the expectation of showing Hitler and 500,000 delegates to the Nurnberg Nazi Party Congress what daring maneuvers it can execute.

The annual Nurnberg rally starts September 5, but war game day will not come until the closing day, September 12. It was understood the air force would have the most prominent place on the program since it was prevented by bad weather from participating in the military review in Berlin last Thursday for Hungary's visiting regent, Admiral Horthy.

The British fleet has been ordered to the North Sea for "certain technical exercises" starting the day after the opening of the Nazi Congress. In London, these were called routine, too.

Flush Excess Acid Waste and Poisons From Kidneys

Comfort Your Irritated Bladder and Stop Getting up Nights

Thousands of intelligent people have backache almost every day and don't know what causes it—others are nervous and irritable—thousands have to get up often at night—have frequent or scanty passage that sometimes smarts and burns—others have puffy eyes and shifting pains.

Perhaps the kidneys are to blame—sometimes waste, excess acid and poisons do not get thru the delicate filters of the kidneys fast enough—they accummulate and may cause trouble.

Pharmacists can tell you that one grand and effective kidney diuretic and stimulant is GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules—they bring results when a good kidney medicine is indicated.

But be very sure to ask for and get GOLD MEDAL—the original and genuine Haarlem Oil Capsules—right from Haarlem in Holland—for your health's sake—reject imitations.

Japan Claims Wide Advances In 6 Provinces, Fall of 12 Towns

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Wednesday), Aug. 31.—Japanese reports from scattered sectors of central and north China said today the Japanese command was loosing its full power in principal and secondary drives to crush Chinese resistance, taking a dozen towns in the last 72 hours.

The provinces touched by this patchwork of war fronts were Kiangsi, Hupeh, Anhwei, Honan, Shensi and Shansi.

Japanese announced they were threatening the following objectives:

1. Teian, Kiukiang-Nanchang Railway town 30 miles south of Kiukiang, which is the principal base of Japanese operations southeast of Hankow.

2. Kwangtsi, pivot of the Chinese line in eastern Hupeh Province, 120 miles east southeast of Hankow.

3. Tunckwan, Shensi Province town at the great bend of the Yellow River, nearly 400 miles northwest of Hankow, and nearby Chinese positions on the river banks in northwest Honan.

4. Numerous fords along the Yellow River from Loyang, northwest Honan, eastward.

5. Honan-Anhwei border points which the Japanese were said to be approaching after occupation of Liuan and Hwoshan in southwestern Anhwei.

The Japanese said their swiftest progress was in the Hwoshan sector and along both banks of the Yangtze, Juichang, 25 miles west of Kiukiang, was said to have fallen to a column on the south bank now within 100 miles of Hankow.

Within the great bend of the Yellow River, Japanese troops were said to have occupied Fengling, threatening the defense of the western end of the Lunghai Railway, which terminates in Shensi.

Contradicting Japanese claims, Chinese said counterattacks north of the Yangtze had thrown back the Japanese while the advance from Kiukiang south toward Nanchang had been halted.

The Chinese admitted, however, they had lost ground in southwestern Anhwei.

Sudeten Nazis Refuse Prague Peace Offer

Demand Home Rule Such as Ireland's; Czechs Hail Britain, France, U. S.

By the United Press.

Prague (Wednesday), Aug. 31.—The Sudeten German party today drove the central European crisis closer to an explosion when it decided to reject the government's new offer of concessions.

The government press, taking courage from yesterday's developments in London and Paris, meanwhile proclaimed that Great Britain, the United States and France have joined in "a terrific weight of power" that is isolating Nazi Germany.

The Sudeten decision, which appeared to banish all immediate hopes of breaking an acute deadlock in the Sudeten-Czech minority reform negotiations, was said to have been placed before President Benes by Dr. Ernest Kundt, chief Sudeten negotiator.

The 3,500,000 members of the German minority were represented as insisting that they will accept nothing less than local self-government based on the lines of Irish home rule granted by Great Britain in 1923.

The Sudeten party late last night sent three copies of its bulletin by special messenger to Viscount Runciman, British neutral mediator in the crisis here.

Runciman, scheduled to attend a reception by Count Karl Buquoy, wealthy landowner, cancelled his attendance at the last moment giving "important conferences" as an excuse.

He began immediate efforts to persuade Konrad Henlein, Sudeten Nazi leader, to reverse his decision.

The decisions of the British and French cabinets meeting in special sessions yesterday were commented upon ironically by Henlein's newspaper, Die Zeit, but the government press hailed them enthusiastically.

"In 1914 England delayed making her standpoint known but today she is not repeating that error," said the newspaper Venkov, referring to the fears of a German invasion.

"To the contrary even the United States has made its standpoint known. Together they (the United States and Britain) form a bloc of 600,000,000 persons against whom no one can pit himself.

"Added to this is the French nation, forming a terrific weight of power. One can speak of the isolation of Germany."

Foreign Minister Kamil Krofta conferred with the British and French ministers, followed by the Soviet Russian minister. There was almost constant communication with the Czech legations in London and Paris.

The government offer, approved by the inner political committee of the cabinet last week, was designed to give the 3,500,000 members of the German minority a large measure of home rule.

Hull Reviews Foreign Crisis For Roosevelt

President, Secretary of State in Conference for 30 Minutes.

By Sidney Olson.

The European crisis was the subject of a very serious 30-minute discussion between President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Cordell Hull yesterday in a conference held almost immediately after the President's return to Washington.

Grave attention was given to the German-Czech situation, it was understood, although the entire international situation was swiftly canvassed. It was learned that Secretary Hull gave the President an oral digest of last-minute news from American diplomats everywhere abroad.

A dispatch from Rome reported that William Phillips, American Ambassador to Italy, last night postponed his departure for Washington.

Italy Only Watching.

Ambassador Phillips had intended sailing later this week but delayed leaving in order to observe the extremely tense situation from Rome. He has been making voluminous confidential reports to Secretary Hull daily on the situation from the Italian end of the Rome-Berlin axis.

The Italian attitude, it is generally believed, is one of mere observation, somewhat colored with sympathy for the Nazi-supported demands of the German Sudenten minority in Czechoslovakia.

Hull, before reporting to the President, conferred with his staff of advisers on the European situation. After the visit across the street to the White House he held a second conference.

He would not comment on his talk with the President and the latter, asked for comment at his press conference, said that he thought it best not to comment on the situation at this time.

Ambassadors Keep Alert.

All American ambassadors and lesser officials in every strategic capital in Europe, it was learned, are at their posts keeping in constant close touch with the swirl of European events.

The crisis, it is expected, will occur at next week's convention of the Nazi Party at Nuremberg, when Chancellor Hitler is expected to make several significant addresses. Some of these will state definitely Germany's future foreign policy, it is believed.

No new statement of the American position is expected here unless sudden unforeseen developments occur. Secretary Hull restated the American attitude Saturday when he reminded foreign signatories of the Kellogg-Briand Pact's tenth anniversary, when 63 nations, including Germany, Italy and Japan, swore to outlaw war as an instrument of national policy. He said then the United States still regards the pact as binding.

France Reaffirms Stand to Aid Czechs in Event of Nazi War

Special Cable to The Post.

Paris, Aug. 30.—With the Czech crisis regarded as somewhat less tense here today, a decree relaxing the French 40-hour week so as to permit the speeding up of production industries engaged upon orders for the national defense was adopted by the French cabinet today.

The unusual procedure of having the decree countersigned by all the cabinet ministers was taken in order to display ministerial unanimity on the subject of the 40-hour week.

[The government again affirmed French determination to march to the aid of Czechoslovakia in case of a German invasion, the Associated Press reported, quoting a foreign office spokesman as saying the ministers voted full approval of the policy.—Editor's note.]

A communique issued after the cabinet meeting stated that the government proposed to use to the utmost all its powers, in order to accelerate production for the national defense. There is reason to believe Premier Daladier and the French cabinet have been thoroughly aroused to the urgent necessity of speeding up the delivery of French arms by the report that Gen. Vuillemin, chief of staff of the French air force, brought back on what he saw of Germany military preparedness during his recent visit to the Reich.

For nearly three hours the French ministers sat in conclave today with President Lebrun in the chair.

Two and a quarter hours of the meeting were devoted to listening to a review of the international situation by Georges Bonnet, foreign minister. He reviewed not only the Czech crisis, but the latest developments in the Spanish civil war and nonintervention, the Far Eastern situation and the Franco-Italian relations.

Later Bonnet received Charles Corbin, French Ambassador to London. He will tell Lord Halifax the attitude of France on the international situation as it was defined at the cabinet meeting.

The energetic action of the British cabinet and the willingness of the Czech government to make fresh concessions to the Sudeten Germans has contributed considerably toward relaxing the international tension, it was thought in official quarters here today. This feeling was reflected on the Paris bourse where the general price level was maintained at yesterday's closing and the franc remained firm.

Nevertheless, French military authorities are not relaxing their "watch on the Rhine" and reports of German military maneuvers along the frontier were carefully noted in official circles in Paris.

The French government is desirous of avoiding any action that could be interpreted in Berlin as provocative and for this reason it was denied that France would participate in any joint demands with Britain and Berlin. However, the French government is standing pat by its intention of fulfilling its obligations under its tretay of alliance with Czechoslovakia should the occasion call for it.

John Hamilton
. . . no fisticuffs

Every day the organization charts of the Government seem to be getting more complicated.

"I am working for XYZ," a charming lady said to me the other evening, naming a big Government agency, "but right now I'm assigned to the CIO."

When President Roosevelt's new cottage on Dutchess Hill is finished, each of the elder Roosevelts will have a place where they can think and work undisturbed; the President at his new cottage, the First Lady at her modest Val Kil cottage, and the President's mother, of course, at the old mansion.

"—maybe he knows the answer"

Tourists seem to regard the peanut wagon at the White House corner as a sort of symbol of democracy . . . The peanut vendor himself, they think, knows a great deal more than he is willing to tell. They ask him all sorts of questions—when will the war in Europe begin, will Roosevelt run for a third term, how about the stock market?

He is a taciturn chap, intent on selling peanuts . . . Mostly he just looks wise.

Two of Washington's elder statesmen lunched at the Willard the other afternoon, and afterward had a little argument about the check; each wanted to pay it . . . Finally they flipped up a coin to see which would pay, and then both had to put on their specs to see whether it was heads or tails.

At the moment the GOP strategy against the third term is a little bit confused. One faction insists that the way to handle it is to keep saying loudly, "Sure, let Roosevelt run, we can beat him, he'd be a pushover, a set-up, easier to beat than Hopkins or Corcoran."

The contrary faction contends that the more talk there is about a third term the more accustomed the voters will become to the idea, and by 1940 there won't be any indignation left in 'em.

"—maybe GW was psychic"

In a glass case at the Archives Building are a lot of signed cards on which George Washington's colonels and generals renounced all fealty to King George III that winter at Valley Forge. Each card is countersigned by GW himself—except the card signed by Maj. Gen. Benedict Arnold . . . Maybe the Father of His Country was psychic.

Like some of the battles on the Russo-Japanese frontier, the skirmish in which John Hamilton was reported involved at a cafe society rendezvous here seems to have occurred in the chiaroscuro of legend. I am informed by Franklyn Waltman of the GOP strategy board that no such encounter took place. If it had, my money would have been on Mr. Hamilton . . . I look forward with relish to the moment when I introduce him to the "eye-witness" who told me the story.

Of the total amount of $1,171,330,921, assessed valuation of land was placed at $480,420,638, and assessed valuation of improvements was estimated at $690,910,283. The total assessed value in 1937 was $1,144,457,153.

Real estate tax for the fiscal year just ended was $20,498,552, based on a tax rate of $1.75 per $100 assessment.

Allen said the value of new buildings and additions added for the fiscal year 1938 amounted to $32,082,700, located as follows: Northwest city, $3,881,500; Northeast and Southeast city, $1,181,000; Southwest city, $396,800; Northwest County and Georgetown, $16,187,700; Northeast and Southeast county, $10,435,700.

Peak Was in 1933.

The peak for assessments of real estate was recorded during the fiscal year 1933 when the land was valued at $1,229,359,566.

During the last year the office collected $1,372,310 in arrears bills, of all types. The personal tax office in the supervision of the various taxes assigned to it, realized a total levy of tax of $9,882,017, which Allen said is far in excess of any previous amount levied for any year.

Of this amount of personal tax, gross receipts and earnings tax brought $6,454,259; automobile personal tax, exclusive of license plates, $769,891, and gasoline tax $2,657,866.

Personal Taxes Rise.

The total levy on tangible personal property resulted in a tax of $1,426,174, or an increase of $385,735. This increase was largely brought about by the use of four examiners allowed in the appropriation bill for 1938, in the examination of the books of various persons, disclosing an undervaluation in some cases, and in some cases property was omitted from return, Allen said.

Intangible personal property yielded a tax of $2,877,360 to the District. This represented an increase of $252,471 over the figure last year. This increase was brought about principally by the examination into the books of accounts of persons, and the check of Federal income tax returns as provided by the Corrigan act, enabling the personal tax office to make excerpts of the green sheets filed with the Bureau of Internal Revenue for persons residing or doing business in the District.

Gross receipts and gross earnings, which included banks, trust companies, building associations, public utilities and the bonding and title companies, amounted $2,150,124, an increase of $70,672 over the preceding fiscal year of 1937.

Man Jumps Off Bridge.

An unidentified colored man jumped from the Eleventh street bridge into the Potomac River about midnight last night. Police were still searching for him early this morning. Charles Mottern, bridge watchman, said he saw the man climb the rail and disappear.

Jackson Lauds Montgomery's 'Vision, Brains'

Land Conservation Draws Mayor's Praise in Kensington Speech.

The "vision and brains" of Montgomery County citizens who "years ago set up the necessary agencies to safeguard the use of land" were praised last night in Kensington by Mayor Howard W. Jackson, of Baltimore, candidate in the Democratic gubernatorial campaign which closes with the primary election September 12.

In Upper Marlboro, campaign headquarters of State Senator Lansdale G. Sasscer announced he will address three political meetings tonight in Hyattsville, Mount Rainier and Seat Pleasant. Sasscer adherents, it was stated, will wind up the campaign with the use of two airplanes to bombard the State with "Sasscer-for-Governor" leaflets.

A third candidate in the confused Maryland campaign, State Comptroller William S. Gordy, jr., promised in Cambridge that he would serve only one term if elected Governor and that he would not build a political machine to keep himself in power.

For Conservation.

Speaking at a Montgomery County rally of the united Democratic organizations, Mayor Jackson stressed his adherence to a program of land consecrvation and development.

"The fine work done in this section is being studied in the hope that its benefits may be obtained for other sections of the State," Jackson said. He cited the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission and the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission as two valuable agencies operating in the neighborhood of Kensington.

Kensington district, he said has developed schools, highways and a police department comparable to those in the Capital "without the advantage of the great taxable basis of the City of Washington as a source of revenue."

Other candidates who spoke briefly at the rally were William C. Walsh, for attorney general; J. Millard Tawes, for State comptroller; James A. Young, for clerk of court of appeals; William D. Byron, for Representative from the Sixth Congressional District; John Oxley, for county commissioner, and Robert Peter, for State Senator.

In deciding to "bomb" the State with pro-Sasscer literature, the Senator will be following the example of Attorney General Herbert O'Conor, who for several weeks has been using an airplane for this purpose. At the same time a fleet of sound trucks will broadcast on Sasscer's behalf in towns and hamlets.

Gordy Hits Factions.

Tomorrow Sasscer is scheduled to invade St. Marys County, reputedly an O'Conor stronghold. Sasscer will speak at Leonardtown, "as one tobacco farmer to another."

Comptroller Gordy declared last night that "I have no connection with and I am not allied with any factional political organization. My one desire is to serve the taxpayer . . . for the four closing years of my public career in a manner that will be for the benefit of our citizens."

"Too long has the welfare of the counties been overlooked through the domination of Baltimore influences," he added. "Our State and party must must not be turned over to professional city politicians, to be controlled and manipulated by hand-picked candidates."

D. C. Fire Loss Is 150% Above That for 1937

Fire in the District caused $726,363 in property damage during the 1938 fiscal year, an increase of 150 per cent over damage in the previous fiscal year, according to the annual report submitted yesterday to the District Commissioners by Fire Chief Charles E. Schrom.

More alarms were sent to the fire department by telephone and verbal messages than through the regular fire alarm system, Schrom said.

Topping the list was the Hahn Shoe Store fire, December 12, 1937, with a damage of $250,000. The Diener Rug Cleaning Co. fire caused damage of $47,000; People's Drug Store, Seventh and M streets northwest, $28,000, and the Burton Awning Co., 911 E street northwest, $23,000.

There were 3,499 fires during the year, an average of nine a day. This constitutes 5.58 fires per 1,000 population. There were 285 less fires during 1937.

During the year 524 false alarms were received, 33 more than in 1937. Arrests and convictions were obtained in cases involving 92 of these alarms.

Schrom stated his department made 2,239 fire-prevention inspections during the year.

The average loss per fire during the past fiscal year was $207, an increase of $129 over the 1937 figure. The per capita loss was $1.16. This figure, Schrom explained, while higher than in recent years, is still substantially lower than that established by fire-control authorities as "very low."

Way to Diminish Subsidy Need Seen By Admiral Land

A "diminishing need for the governmental support through subsidies" of the merchant marine can be envisioned if American travelers and shippers give a proper share of their patronage to United States ships, Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the Maritime Commission, said yesterday.

Last year American ships carried only 35 per cent of the United States' $1,500,000,000 foreign trade and only 30 per cent of the 366,500 Americans who went overseas, he wrote in the seventy-fifth anniversary edition of the Army and Navy Journal, just issued.

"With the exception of the super liners," he declared, "American steamship companies offer service from some of our ports for both cargo and passengers that is equal if not superior to that of foreign lines. Yet American shippers through these ports give the foreign . . . shippers the bulk of their patronage. These same shippers would be the first to call for help if the foreign ships on which they depend were suddenly shifted elsewhere by disorders at home.

Land also stated that 500 new merchant ships for commerce and national defense would be required during the next ten years.

President Out Of Palmisano's Maryland Race

Won't Support '100 Pct.' New Deal D'Alesandro, He Tells Press.

President Roosevelt, at his press conference yesterday declared he would take no hand in the bitter fight for Maryland's Second District House seat between Representative Vincent L. Palmisano and Thomas d'Alesandro, 34-year-old Baltimore councilman.

The Chief Executive's action followed reports that his visit to Maryland on Labor Day would include at least an inferential blessing for the foe of the House District Committee chairman.

The intense rivalry between the two involves Representative Ambrose Kennedy, vice chairman of the House District Committee, and a business associate of d'Alesandro. Kennedy is also up for renomination in Baltimore.

Can't Head Two Committees.

Palmisano has charged that Kennedy put up d'Alesandro in the hope that his defeat would leave Kennedy with the chairmanship of the District Committee. Representative Kennedy has heatedly denied the accusation, asserting that he was already head of the Claims Committee, and under House rules could not be chairman of two committees at the same time.

"The Claims Committee is more important to me," Kennedy declared. "If I am re-elected, I will stick by that committee."

D'Alesandro has accused Palmisano with having been the worst District Committee chairman on record. He has also made much of Palmisano's opposition to congressional legislation hitting the "numbers racket." Palmisano has printed 50,0000 copnies of the speech he gave in the House outlining his reasons for opposing the bill. He has not yet mailed the pamphlets out, however, although the primaries are September 12.

D'Alesandro "100 Percenter."

Also running against Palmisano is Louis J. Svepla. Kennedy must defeat Walter Wentworth, Francis A. Michel and Andrew Kenny.

One of D'Alesandro's six sons is named Franklin Delano Roosevelt D'Alesandro, and the Democratic candidate has been campaigning on a "100 per cent" New Deal platform. Palmisano has admitted to being only a "99 per cent" pro-Administrationite.

D. C. Barbers Must Get Licenses Before Sept. 7

Barbers in the District yesterday were notified they must register with the Board of Barber Examiners by next Wednesday or pay a $5 assessment and take a mechanical and written examination.

Saviour Sidotti, president of the board, located at 515 D street northwest, said applications could be mailed to the office postmarked not later than midnight September 7.

Arts Commission Stalls Start Of Municipal Center Work

District

The allotment of the money to begin construction of the Municipal Center, which will cost an estimated $9,000,000 when complete, was announced by Acting PWA Administrator Howard A. Gray. He said it was apportioned so as to "provide suitable administrative offices to allow concentration of District activities."

Library Site Earmarked.

Specific plans for the project must be worked out by the Fine Arts Commission, the National Capital Planning Commission, the PWA and the District Architect. Completion of plans will undoubtedly hinge on the disposal of the Fine Arts Commission grievance with the closing of John Marshall place.

The District government more than three years ago purchased the property for the site of the center at a cost of $6,000,000. The first unit of the center for which Congress provided funds during the last session was planned to accomodate the Police Department, Fire and Traffic Departments. This building would be constructed at Third street and Indiana avenue, at a cost of $1,500,000.

Square 491, representing the southwest portion of the site, and now housing the National Guard, Department of Motor Vehicles and the District WPA offices, has already been earmarked by Congress as the site for the proposed main Public Library.

The southeast portion of the site, according to plans, would provide space for the proposed Washington Auditorium.

When the Commissioners asked for the money, in addition to the $1,500,000 provided by Congress, they planned to erect a six-story granite building so designed that other wings could be added as additional funds became available.

The present District Building will be taken over by the Federal Government when the municipal offices are moved to the new location on Judiciary Square.

When the contract for the funds is signed, PWA will release 15 per cent of the allotment for initial expenses. Under the PWA law, the project must be completed by January 1, 1940.

Agitation for a Decade.

Federal and District officials have been agitating for a decade for the new municipal development. Several times in the last three years the District was denied funds to begin construction by the Public Works Administration.

In October, 1935, Senator King created a stir when he announced President Roosevelt approved an allotment of $4,000,000 to begin construction of the Municipal Center.

When Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen suggested in 1934 the municipal center plan be reduced from four squares to two squares, many protested.

Meanwhile, the Commissioners and PWA signed formal contracts covering loan grants for five groups of projects, which the Works Administration had already approved.

Total cost of the five groups of projects is $3,956,625, of which the District will repay $2,176,143.75, or 55 per cent.

Boys, Parents Take Stand on Arrests Over Firecrackers

Seven boys, with several of their parents, took the witness stand at a police trial board hearing yesterday to testify against Policeman Charles Fox of the Eleventh Precinct, accused of conduct prejudicial to the reputation of the police force in arresting seven juveniles for shooting fireworks.

During five hours of testimony, the boys claimed they had been pitching horseshoes when Fox arrested them, July 1, near his home at 4208 Twelfth place northeast. They said Fox had moved into the house two months earlier, and had asked them several times not to play nearby when he was sleeping during the daytime.

The trial board, Inspector William E. Holmes and Captains Hugh Groves and Lloyd Kelley, were told no action had been taken against the boys except that they were questioned by police officers, charged at the Twelfth Precinct with discharging fireworks, and turned over to their parents.

The board withheld decision until this morning.

Rep. Kenney's Widow Charges He Was Killed

Presses for Investigation of Fall From Sixth Floor of Hotel.

By the Associated Press.

Hasbrouck Heights, N. J., Aug. 30. A political associate of the widow of Representative Kenney said tonight she and Mrs. Kenney had been pressing for months for a reopening of the investigation of the Congressman's death on the theory he was pushed through a sixth floor window of the Hotel Carlton in Washington and was not killed in an accidental fall.

Mrs. Mary L. W. Hicks, who said she was manager of Mrs Elizabeth Kenney's campaign for the seat her husband held, declared she and the widow were "positive it was not an accidental death."

Mrs. Hicks said in a statement that she had accompanied Mrs. Kenney on several trips to Washington and to see high Government officials in efforts to get a further investigation of the Cliffside Park Democrat's death January 27.

Mrs. Kenney, she said, had discussed the case with J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, but got no satisfaction from the police "because they hushed it up."

Asked for comment on Mrs. Hicks' statement, Acting Detective Chief Keck said in Washington there was no basis for a murder theory in Kenney's death.

Jobless Benefits Drop in District; Pay 2,176 in July

Unemployment compensation payments in the District for July declined $34,504 from the previous month, it was announced yesterday. A decline of 8 per cent, as compared with June was noted for the county as a whole. The Unemployment Compensation Board referred to the drop as "he first significant decrease since payments began."

The board attributes the decrease partly to re-employment of workers, fewer lay-offs and exhaustion of wage credits of workers who previously had received benefits.

The District board handled 2,176 initial claims during July and paid $144,019 in benefits.

All-Star Game Tonight Will Be the Toughest 60 Minutes of Pros' Lives, Baugh Says

By Sammy Baugh.

Chicago, Aug. 30.—When that opening whistle blows tomorrow night at Soldiers Field, the Washington Redskins will know what to expect. They will be expecting the toughest 60 minutes of football of their lives.

BAUGH.

Yes, tougher than those final two games of our season last year against the big New York Giants and the bigger Chicago Bears. Those two games weren't any afternoon teas, I want to tell you. At the finish of that battle at Chicago against the Bears the Redskins looked as if they had been run through a hamburger machine. Of course, we didn't leave the Bears exactly spic and span, either.

But we aren't kidding ourselves about these College All-Stars. They aren't just another college team. If they were, it would be no contest. They wouldn't even extend the Redskins. But that team Bo McMillan has primed for us is no ordinary college club. It's hand-picked from the list of the entire country's college stars of 1937 and we'd be stupid to underrate it.

There will be a dozen fellows on that College All-Star club who will probably step right into pro football after the game and make good. They are already signed up and out there tomorow night they won't be pulling any punches. They'll be out to make an impression on the pro coaches. And don't think those professional coaches won't be watching that game en masse. They'll want a good look at the new fellows they're counting on—fellows like Whizzer White, Frank Patrick, Corby Davis, Andy Puplis, Andy Farkas and Robbins of Arkansas.

All night those All-Star coaches will be pumping fresh men at us, and we know it. Don't forget they have a squad of 65, compared with our 30. Have you ever been out there on the line in that second half after you've played 30 or 40 minutes of tough football, with your chief consolation being the fact that the fellow opposite you is as tired as you are? Well, then, you're not exactly overjoyed when that other fellow is gone and another big bruiser, fresh and ready and full of pep, starts leering at you from the same spot.

WHITE.

I think the Redskins will be in as good condition as any team can at this stage of the season, but I'm not forgetting what happened to the Green Bay Packers in the second half of last year. I was with the College All-Stars then, and in that second half anybody could see the pros were tired. I knew we had 'em.

The Redskins are bound to be weary toward the finish and our best bet is to go in there and try to rush and pass the Collegians off their feet in the opening two quarters. I think we will, too. We'll be fresh and I know we'll be more versatile out there. If we don't bang across a couple of touchdowns in the first half we may be in foul shape out there.

Don't forget, either, that we haven't been able to scout the College All-Stars. All we know is that they'll probably use Bo McMillan's Indiana plays. But we don't know so much about the individual style of those college players and we'll have to make some quick adjustments after the first ten minutes.

Of course, the college people haven't scouted the Redskins, either, this year, but they're not ignorant about us. Those college coaches know how the Redskins play. They saw us shoot the works against a half-dozen teams last year in the pro league when we couldn't afford to hold anything back. We'll be in there working with new plays but we won't be in anything like midseason form. Don't get me wrong, though. I'm not setting up any advance alibi. What I have been saying lately still goes. I think we'll lick the All-Stars. And if you want more details I think we'll lick 'em by running up an early lead with both a running and passing attack, and then holding that lead in the last two quarters.

We know a few things about the College All-Stars, of course. We know that they'll have Whizzer White, Frank Isbell and Robbins in the tail-back position where all the trouble starts. And that Frank Patrick, of Pitt, and Corby Davis, of Indiana, and probably Puplis, of Notre Dame, will be operating from the fullback job.

I saw Whizzer White play just once, but he could play on my football team. He looked to me like the best ball carrier I ever saw in college football. I got a gander at him last fall when he came down to Texas with his Colorado team to play Rice in the New Year's Day game. Colorado was outclassed as a team, but that didn't prevent White from looking like the best player on the field. He passed for one touchdown and intercepted a pass for another.

He has plenty of swift when he tucks that ball under his arm, and a nice change of pace, too. I saw him kick with the best of 'em. He holds the ball from a low position and gets plenty of yardage. For some reason the Colorado team didn't pass much that day against Rice; so I don't know about White's passing. But they say he'll do that, too.

ROUTT.

But I don't think it will make so much difference. We'll still win that ball game!

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Chicago, Aug. 30.—Here we go, off the deep end again. Our irresistible impulse to play a hunch today takes the form of dedicating this piece to a fellow who can't produce a single clipping but who, we think, will be sort of famous 24 hours hence.

POVICH.

The talk here is of Sammy Baugh and Whizzer White as the Redskins and the College All-Stars prepare to enter the arena tomorrow night. And very properly, because that pair are the stars of the two football outfits. But we are entertaining, nevertheless, a sneaking suspicion that the talk on Thursday morning will embrace a new name which, at this writing, is as obscure as that of Mussolini's wife.

Ever hear of Dick Tuckey? Neither did we, until a few days ago. He's with the Redskins, but he's not actually a Redskin. You see, he hasn't made good yet. But tomorrow night, against the College All-Stars he'll get his chance and our hunch is that he is considerable football player.

He came to the Redskins three weeks ago, saying he was a backfield man. Actually, that's how it happened. They didn't send for him. He wasn't on that long draft list of college headliners who caused a scramble by pro league catches flourishing contracts. Nobody wanted Dick Tuckey last fall. He didn't figure in any coach's plans for 1938.

A Year at Manhattan.

He was playing with the Paterson, N. J., Club last year in one of those fly-by-night minor professional leagues. His college football experience was limited to a year on the Manhattan varsity. Eddie Leary, a pony back at Georgetown during the Lou Little regime, recommended Tuckey to Head Coach Ray Flaherty, of the Redskins, a month ago. But the recommendation didn't take immediately.

"Never heard of him," Flaherty told Leary. "If he's the kind of a football player you say he is, why didn't the Giants or Brooklyn grab him? They've got scouts up in that league. They don't pass up these good football players. I get tips like this every day. Sorry, Leary."

Disappointed, but not discouraged, Leary sought Flaherty out again a few days later. It seems that he had a special interest in Tuckey. Up in Danbury, Conn., the pair were close friends. And the truth was that Tuckey needed a job . . . needed it badly. At 22, Tuckey had his share of responsibilities. There was Mrs. Tuckey and there were two Tuckey kids, aged 4 and 2. The boy was up against it.

Flaherty finally capitulated. "Well, bring him down and we'll look this fellow over," he told Leary. "One thing, it won't cost much. I'm breaking a rule when I take fellows on like this, but if he's half the football player you say he is, he must be a wonder. Have him report to us on August 10."

Tuck Gets Serious.

So it was that a big, strapping sandy haired chap with a powerful pair of legs sauntered into the Redskins hotel in Washington on August 10 and sought out Flaherty. "My name's Tuckey—Dick Tuckey," he said. "Eddie Leary said you'd know about me."

"Tuckey? Oh, yeah, sure, you're that fellow Tuckey," said Flaherty, appraising the follow with a head-to-foot glance before he spoke. "You're a big boy, I see. That's good. Report for practice tomorrow morning."

On that practice field Tuckey went seriously about his work. He wasn't bothered much by the photographers who scrambled after pictures of Baugh, of Millner, of Malone and Edwards, and then mopped up on the highly touted rookies—Karamatic, Abitt, Hartman, Masterson. Tuckey knew he didn't rate much and he was getting a terrific kick simply out of being around fellows like Baugh and Pinckert and Riley Smith. He was sort of grateful for the chance to stick around.

On a Sunday, ten days later, the Redskin coaches divided the squad into two groups, announced that the first regulation scrimmage game would be staged. Because the squad was none too large, everybody would get a chance to play. Tuckey found himself on "Baker's Braves," a motley collection of rookies and substitute who were being offered as practice fodder for the regulars.

To the 3,000 fans who were attracted to the Ballston Field for that scrimmage, it was all high good fun, this display of the Redskins. But to Dick Tuckey and a dozen other kids on "Baker's Braves" it wasn't pure fun. To them that scrimmage was important. On that day they would

Nats, Weak in Pinch, Lose on Bad Peg, 3-2

Chicago Hurler Outpitches Appleton in Tight Game; Appleton's Error Hurts.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Long John Rigney, a gaunt creature with a curve ball as round as Marlboro's race track, silenced the Nationals' big guns yesterday with a six-hit performance that enabled the Chicago White Sox to make off with the first game of the current series, 3-2.

Rigney was right, no doubt about it, for when he bore down and shoved his fast 'un down the alley the Nats were as defenseless as a speed-violator in traffic court.

But you can't ignore the performance of Pete Appleton, Washington's chucker, who turned in a nice effort but lost on his own miscue. The stolid Pole conspired with Rigney to give the fans a long-awaited old-fashioned pitching duel, allowing only seven hits—and it was kind of hard to see him lose.

Wild Throw Hurt.

Pete, however, had no one to blame but himself when the Sox got their winning run, for it was his wild heave to second that put the runner in scoring position. His mates made a gallant effort to retrive the ball game for him with a brief outburst of hitting in the ninth, but, as mentioned above, Mr. Rigney was pitching for the Sox—and it was major league brand of curving he served up.

Appleton's errant pitch not only cost him the ball game, but prevente the Nats from moving back into the first division, as the Tigers absorbed a 3-to-1 drubbing at New York.

Norman Schlueter, So. catcher, opened the eighth by bouncing a double off the leftfield wall. It looked dark for the Nats until Appleton pounced on Rigney's weak tap to the box and threw him out, holding Schlueter at second. He offset the good work a moment later with a peg to Sammy West in centerfield, intending to nip Schlueter off the bag, and the latter romped to third unmolested.

Kuhel drew a pass when Bucky Harris wig-wagged instructions to try for a double-play, but this strategy failed when Owen hit a slow roller to Travis who had to hustle to get the batter at first. Schlueter scored what proved to be the deciding run on the blow.

Ninth Inning Rally Fails.

Appleton settled down after that, but it was a trifle late to be drawing up new resolutions. The Nats were battling for a lost cause.

You would've't have thought so in the ninth when Travis' bat bumped one of Rigney's fast balls straight on the nose for a double to left-centerfield. But you knew it was true when the next two batters, Bonura and Simmons flied out. Travis raced to third on Simmons' hoist to center. Buddy Myer needled new life into the rally with a hit over second, which Appling knocked down but couldn't field. But this proved to be merely an idle gesture when West flied out to center.

Chicago scored first, getting a run in the fifth on successive singles by Steinbach and Dykes, followed by Schlueter's infield out. But the Nats bounced right back with one on their own account to square matters in their half of the inning.

Myer, whose two hits represented one-third of the team's batting, tripled off the rightfield wall with one down, and scored standing up on West's loft to leftfield.

The Sox got their second run in the seventh on Radcliffe's scorching triple to right centerfield, and Appling's roller to Myer, and you know already how they added the third and decisive marker.

The second game of the series, which marks the Dykes' Destroyers' final appearance here this season, will be played this afternoon with Johnny Whitehead tossing for Chicago and "Dutch" Leonard throwing 'em at the Sox.

Stocklinski Is Defeated By Channing

Latter Wages Stiff Battle to Gain Semifinals of Net Play.

By Jack Munhall.

Overcoming through sheer fight and perseverance the twin disadvantages of a love set deficit and a 3—0 lead Ray Stocklinski held in the third and deciding set, Charley Channing became the first semi-finalist in the Post-Middle Atlantic tennis championships yesterday when he thrashed his favored foe, 0—6, 6—3, 6—4, at Edgemoor.

Apparently hopelessly beaten in the first set, when he could find no flaw in Stocklinski's soft, consistent game, and again at the start of the final set, when he seemed to tire rapidly, the 20-year-old university junior called on a fighting heart and a young, sturdy body to pull him through to a stunning upset.

It might be said he won sitting down, for on match point, which he gained by angling a shot to Stocklinski's right after an amazing "get," Channing fell backward and lay on the court as the large gallery applauded his deserved victory.

Channing who has been improving rapidly all season, proved in his defeat of the recent Government tournament finalist that he includes more in his tennis repertoire than a booming forehand. For it was not with powerful shots that he beat Stocklinski but with Ray's own steady, unspectacular game.

Perceiving early in the match that his power shots were not accurate enough to offset Stocklinski's consistent returns and tricky angle and drop shots, Charley reversed his strategy and with a

Pirates Beat Giants In Series Opener, 7-1

Victory in Opening of 'Crucial' Meeting Extends Bucs' Lead to 6½ Games Over Terrymen.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Aug. 30.—The Pirates, behind Right-Hander Jim Tobin's eighth five-hit pitching job of the year, rode rough-shod over their crippled New York Giants today, battering their way to a 7-1 triumph that increased their margin over the Terrymen to six and a half games.

Gus Suhr, who has been benched several times this season for failing to hit, provided the main punch. He had a perfect day at bat with a walk, a single, double and triple, and drove in five runs with his two extra-base clouts.

Dick Coffman, making his first start for the Giants since October 2, 1937, bore the brunt of the Pittsburgh assault. He gave up eight of their 13 hits and six of the runs before retiring in favor of a pinch-hitter in the seventh.

Giants Grab Lead.

The Giants were first to score, Joe Moore greeting Tobin with a two-bagger to right and scoring all the way from second on a wild pitch, but the Buccaneers put the game on ice before the inning was over.

With one out, Lloyd Waner singled and Arky Vaughan and Johnny Rizzo drew passes to fill the bases. Suhr cleared them a moment later with a rousing three-bagger off the rightfield screen.

Waner also started each of the two other Pittsburgh scoring innings. In the sixth he led off with a single. Coffman retired the next two batters, but then Rizzo singled, Suhr doubled, again off the screen, and Pep Young singled in quick succession for three more tallies and a 6-1 lead.

Pirates Score Last Run.

The Pirates got their final run in the eighth off Hy Vandenberg on successive singles by Lloyd and Paul Waner and Vaughan.

Tobin scattered the five Giant safeties, four of them singles, over as many innings and was in trouble only once, in the sixth. In that frame the Giants filled the bases, with two out, on Bob Seeds' single and passes to Mel Ott and Jim Ripple. But Tobin threw out Bill Cissell for the final out.

In gaining his twelfth victory against seven defeats, Tobin gave only three walks and struck out two men. The Giants, in addition to experimenting with Coffman as a starting pitcher, were forced to return Ott to third base and shift George Myatt to shortstop, since Dick Bartel was out with a lame elbow.

Browns Trip Bosox, 9 to 5

'Doc' Cramer Makes His Debut as Hurler.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Aug. 30.—The St. Louis Browns took the series opener from the Boston Red Sox today, 9 to 5, in a game marked by the pitching debut of Roger (Doc) Cramer, the Sox' All-Star outfielder. Cramer took over in the sixth inning after Joe Heving and Dick Midkiff failed to halt the Browns, and allowed only three hits the rest of the way. However, St. Louis made two runs off him and stole three bases.

The Brownies had picked on Starting Pitcher Joe Heving and Reliefer Dick Midkiff for seven runs in the first five innings, when Manager Joe Cronin, in despair, finally acceded to Cramer's long-standing plea to pitch.

Though Cramer, who is 32 years old, went to the Philadelphia Athletics in 1929 as a pitcher, he has patroled the outfield without interruption ever since, save for an exhibition game he pitched for the

Redskins Rule 6-5 Favorites in Star Classic Tonight

80,000 Fans Expected to Jam Soldiers' Field for Battle Between Slingin' Sammy Baugh and 'Whizzer' White.

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Chicago, Aug. 30.—Under the lights of vast Soldiers' Field, rimmed by 80,000 thrill-scenting fans, Washington's Redskins tomorrow night will defeat the College All-Stars in football's opening display of 1938.

That is what the betting odds say. But they do not say it very emphatically. For the Redskins, kings of the pro football realm, are receding favorites. Down, down the odds have been hammered until tonight in Chicago bookmaking shops 6 to 5 is the betting.

Once again professional and college football are posing the question: Which is superior? Upholding the pros' contentions will be the team that last season swept to a complete triumph in the National League, bowling over the Green Bay Packers, the New York Giants and the Chicago Bears in a dazzling succession of victories.

Ready to charge the Redskins from across the scrimmage line will be the best football players of the 1937 college crop, culled from every corner of the Nation and available to the number of 65. It is the team that football men are calling the best College All-Stars squad ever assembled in the five years' history of the game.

Tonight Chicago is thoroughly alive to the impending spectacle at Soldiers' Field where, after bands and pageantry are done with, the referee's whistle will toot for the opening kick-off at 8:30 p. m. Downtown hotels were filling rapidly, newspapers are crammed with pregame highlights and ticket scalpers are doing a rush business.

10,000 Seats Left.

With fewer than 10,000 of the cheaper price seats remaining at an early hour this afternoon, a complete sell-out was assured.

"Stop Sammy Baugh!" that is the battle cry of the All-Star coaches and the supporters of the collegians as the game nears, for on the same field where last year he led he college All-Stars to victory over the pros, Slingin' Sammy tomorrow will represent the professionals' chief hopes of winning.

It is no secret that Slingin' Sammy Baugh and his forward passes will be the deadliest weapon of the Redskins tomorrow—the same, stabbing aerial attack that carried the Washington club to so many of its league victories last season.

Head Coach Ray Flaherty frankly admits that Baugh's passing is his chief hope. "That's how we win ball games," he said tonight. "And if Sammy's passes click, we'll win another one tomorrow night."

Baugh vs. White.

It will be Baugh vs. Whizzer White in a battle of backfield titans. For as surely as the Redskins are relying on Baugh to lay waste to the collegians' defense, the All-Stars are depending on White to spark them to victory.

The Whizzer, already signed to a professional contract with Pittsburgh, will not be a member of the collegians' starting lineup, but is expected to make his entrance into the game shortly after. As a multiple threat with his running, kicking and passing, he is tabbed as the spearhead of the Collegians' attck.

But the Collegians are not as thoroughly dependent on White as the Redskins are beholden to Baugh. For in that college squad are such as Croby Davis, the wild bull from Indiana University, and Cecil Isbell and Don Heap, Purdue's potent gifts to the All-Stars On the Collegians' bench will be no less than 28 other backs whose performances on last year's college teams merited them places on the squad.

Big Reserve Power.

Boiled down, it looms as a battle between Baugh's passing for the Redskins and the Collegians' superior reserve power. Youth, speed and numbers will be on the side of the All-Stars. Will those elements be overmatched by the Redskins' experience, cohesion and the incomparable passing of Slingin' Sammy?

Within the past 24 hours, the Washington athletes have been lashed into a high competitive fury for the game by Head Coach Flaherty who, in dressing-room lectures, has assailed what he called their "lack of spirit." Tonight, as the Redskins took their final workout under the lights of Soldier's Field, the squad displayed a newfound grimness.

Flaherty who is bent on coaching his first professional team to whip an All-Star college aggregation in three years, has ignored his rookie talent in selecting his starting line-

'Skins' Coach Fears Stars' Man Power

Pins Hopes on Baugh's Passes and Air Defense.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Chicago, Aug. 30.—Head Coach Ray Flaherty, of the Redskins, tonight asserted he would be happy to win tomorrow's game with the All-Stars "by any kind of a score."

"Even if it's 2 to 0, I'll be satisfied," he said. "I'll settle for any kind of a win."

Flaherty declared he had one paramount fear—the superior reserve power of the collegians.

"If they keep rushing fresh men at us every quarter, they might wear the Redskins down," he said. "We've got to get in our licks in the first half or we may be sunk. The Redskins are in good condition, but they never have been asked to play against a team that could send 65 different men in there.

"I'll go out on the limb this far. If our passes click, we'll win—if we can stop the collegians' passing attack. We aren't afraid of their running game."

"Whizzer" White, chief scoring threat of the All-Stars, was thrown for a loss even before the opening whistle. He slipped on a cake of soap in his shower at the practice field and cut a deep gash over his left eye as his head struck the plumbing.

Wayne Millner, Redskins' end, summed up one viewpoint of the game today when he said, "Sure, those college boys have a lot of stars, but who did they star against? College teams, that's who. There are fellows on the Redskins who have been starring against pro teams. And the pros are in a tougher league. We'll win this game."

Irish Carroll, Catholic University ace who was voted a place on the Collegian's squad, dolefully watched the final practice from the sidelines. Carroll, who suffered a back injury in practice, was discharged from the hospital yesterday after a week's treatment. He is encased in a plaster cast from his hips to his shoulders.

Head Coach Flaherty chaperoned the Redskins to the Cubs-Bees game at Wrigley Field this afternoon. Flaherty was a first baseman with the Bees in 1930, beforet hey discovered that he couldn't hit curve-ball pitching.

Wee Willie Wilkins, 268-pound rookie tackle of the Redskins, tonight refused to be awed by tales of the prowess of the college All-Stars.

Told by teammates who had watched the practice of the Collegians that the All-Stars had a squad of 65 big bruisers fresh and ready for the fray, Wee Willie was not visibly impressed.

"Sixty-five men," they told Willie, "just think of that."

"Uh, huh," said Willie, meditatively.

"Is that all you can say, uh, huh,'" he was asked.

"Well," said Willie, "I was just thinking. I was just thinking that they can't play more than 11 at a time."

Bobby Brownell Wins Amateur Qualifying Medal With 143

Stevinson And Yoder Make Grade

Ralph Bogart, With 149, Martin McCarthy Successful.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Bettering par figures by one stroke and the field by two, Bobby Brownell, 19-year-old Duke University sophomore from the Manor Club, won the medal in the National Amateur sectional qualifying rounds yesterday at Congressional with 71, 72—143 total. Forty-six from the District, Maryland, Virginia and Hanover, Pa., competed.

Brownell paced five qualifiers from Washington and three from Baltimore, all with varying scores and from different clubs, and ranging in age from the 56-year-old veteran from Columbia, Miller B. Stevinson, to Ralph Bogart, 18, Wilson High golf team captain, representing the Army and Navy club.

Rolling Road's bespectacled inventor-golfer, Spencer S. Overton, was a stroke higher than Brownell on each round, and finished second with 72, 73—145. He was trailed by two other Baltimoreans, Ernest Caldwell, 72, 74—146, and the favored Otto Greiner, who tacked an afternoon par 72 to his earlier 76.

Bogart paired two consistent efforts of 75, 74—149 for the fifth berth, with Martin F. McCarthy, perennial qualifier from Beaver Dam, a shot back with 77, 73—150. Stevinson, making a grand comeback after a year's lapse from competitive golf, was steady with 77, 75—152, with Levi Yoder on the borderline at 75, 78—153.

Misses Play-Off Chance.

Forest Thompson, Beaver Dam, and the first of the host club's seven entries, M. Parker Nolan, tied for the top alternate's post, the former taking a bogey 5 on the last hole to miss a play-off with Yoder, while Nolan slipped to 79 in the afternoon after a morning 77.

District Champion Billy Shea, Congressionals favorite, failed by four strokes to gain a berth, the most surprising performance of the day. Harvey Johnson, Columbia, who was 162 and nine shots back, also was among the main disappointments that included Earl McAleer, of the host club.

Greiner and Bogart will make their debuts in the national championship when the qualifying starts at Oakmont, Pittsburgh, September 12. It will be the second trip for Brownell, who missed leading the local field by a stroke two years ago at Columbia, the fourth big tourney for Caldwell and Yoder, fifth for Stevinson and Overton and the sixth for Martin McCarthy, tournament "veteran" of the qualifiers.

Brownell finished each round like a true champion, as he thrilled the home-green gallery twice by driving the par-four, uphill, 285-yard hole. He barely missed his eagle putt the first round and putted carefully for his birdie the second.

Out in 38 Strokes.

The slim, blond medalist, his back taped for a strained ligament, played the outgoing nine in 38, one over, but included two deuces on the part three holes and his birdie on 18, in an incoming 33 for a 71 and the morning round lead.

One over par playing the twenty-seventh hole, Bobby dropped a 12-foot putt for a deuce, his third of the day, then parred eight holes in succession and climaxed his fine performance with the birdie on 18, that clinched the medal honors. A former District champion, Brownell won the Middle Atlantic Junior last month at Indian Spring, and was finalist in the Middle Atlantic championship at Charlottesville.

Bogart, who set a course record at Army and Navy two weeks ago, also included six birdies in his rounds, but went two over par on two holes, the eighth and twelfth of the opening round. Bogart's seven on the eighth hole was the only seven of the day.

McCarthy, after carding a 77 on the first round, said "I guess I better go to work," and that's just what he did in the afternoon as he went out in two under par 35, lowest round of the day on the long, par 37 first nine, and came back in 38 to make the grade by a comfortable margin.

Stevinson 4 Over Par.

Stevinson was four over par on the first six holes but played the next three holes in 3, 4, 3, two birdies and a par, to turn in 39. He was back in 38 and chopped a stroke off each nine in the afternoon. He finished one under par on the last four holes, getting a birdie on the final hole, via a 10-foot putt, clinching a place.

Yoder started with a 6, turned in 39 and was back in 36 for a 75, and in a good spot at the end of the initial trip. A 5 on the ninth hole of the afternoon round, where he knocked his tee shot in the hedges and dropped out with a stroke penalty, hurt his chances. He returned in 37, however, for the 153 score that was in by a single shot.

Putting trouble was experienced by a majority in the field of 46, 4 withdrew from the original list of 80. The number ran as high as 8 and 9 3-putt greens, while more than 1 putt of less than a foot slipped by the cup. Stevinson, with only 1 3-putt greens, set the putting pace.

Overton Misses Out.

Overton had a chance to tie Brownell as late as the thirty-fourth hole, but he three-putted and finished with two pars for his 145. Had he parred the thirty-fourth he would have required two birdies to tie, but the last two are known as "birdie holes."

Harry Pitt, Manor, who has been playing little golf, had the best streak of the day, 3 under par for the last seven holes of the back nine, including birdies on 12, 13 and 14.

Dun Lucky Wins Marlboro Feature as Dark Revue Throws Jockey

Victors Pays $19.70 Price For Anover

Riderless Horse Finishes Way Ahead and Circles Track Twice.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Marlboro, Md., Aug. 30.—Capt. Ewart Johnston, Virginia sportsman, provided the winner of another feature race here when his Dun Lucky, 4-year-old son of Dunlin, scored a lucky victory in the Anover Farm Purse.

Mrs. J. B. Bond's Dark Revue, heavily played favorite, finished yards in front but without a rider. The daughter of Twink went into the air at the break and shook off Jockey Skeets Holland. Just to show she was in a running mood, the jockeyless Dark Revue circled the track twice after running a mile and a sixteenth.

With Sammy Palumbo doing the booting, Dun Lucky came to the imaginary wire two and a half lengths in advance of E. A. Roast's Bargain Boy. Two lengths back was F. C. Frisbie's Boosel.

Dun Lucky was overlooked in the betting and supplied his backers with a $19.70 pay-off. It was the gelding's second start since he gained fame as a steeplechase horse at the Bel Air meeting.

With Dark Revue out of it, Call Me Anne was first to show in front. Dun Lucky broke well back but Palumbo soon had him close to the pacemaker. After the half-mile, Dun Lucky went to the front. The other boys put on the pressure but none could dislodge the Palumbo mount.

The Flamingo Farms' Gesture, with Jockey Manny Berg up, found a field of maidens she could down in the first race and turned in a half-length victory, to pay her backers a $5.30 mutuel. The Tonkin-Pending entry took second and third money with Mr. Fingers and Smada.

In the cloest finish of the meeting thus far, the photo gave Jacksaw a nose victory over the favored Hiblaze in the second race. Flitting Feng, the longest shot in the field, was third. Jacksaw, owned by H. R. Dulaney, jr., overcame a lot of trouble to score under Eddie Kilgore's handling, and paid $11.

Schley Buck almost fell at the second turn in the third race while apparently beaten, but the Canter colt went on to win from Sweepemup and Crossing Over with a gallant stretch dash superintended by Jockey Lou Machado. Schley Buck paid $9.60.

Goggles Aid Winning Jockey

Hugh Miller, Post Staff Photographer.

Selections at Marlboro.

Dear Al: One of the most pathetic sights I've seen around a race track was that of a trainer cooling out an old horse which had gone very lame in a race. There were tears in the trainer's eyes. In his hand he carried a bottle of whisky. Every couple of turns of the ring, he would stop, take a drink and then give the old horse a drink. And the horse seemed to be enjoying himself. Happy Gordon, the outrider who leads the fields to the post, gave an excellent account of himself before the first race. Jolly Feast threw Jackey Machado and started out alone. Gordon put the spurs to his pony, came up abreast of the 2-year-old and grabbed his bridle in typical Wild West fashion. One customer remarked that Gordon and the lead pony probably could win the race. I don't know how old this one is, but Clocker Mike brought it around. "There are 125,000,000 in this country," said Mike. "Of this number, 25,000,000 cannot work due to the child labor laws, and 30,000,000 are eligible for the old age pension. Of the remaining 70,000,000, 40,000,000 are on the government pay rolls. Of the other 30,000,000, 29,999,998 are unemployed. This leaves two people to do all the work. And I'm getting tired of the President going fishing." Mike had his "Talk-a-Horse" machine in action soon after the entries came out for tomorrow. He quoted Stepee as saying, "I won here last year, and I'm going to win here this year. Watch my dust." Sally Sidesaddle, Mike's girl, likes Meridian Time. She was looking over my shoulder. BILL.

First race—Anneke ran second at this track last year and turned in a similar performance at Cumberland earlier in the month. Seems nicely placed in the day's opener and I'm going to string along. Oteebee, bred for speed, has shown good early foot on occasions and could surprise. Roving Eye to take care of the others.

Second race—Adhelmar, a gun out of the gate, downed virtually the same kind last out. Needs only to get that good break to make it two in a row. L'Envoi galloped along in front of that last field and is dangerous. Vendor's Lien for the show end.

Third race—Scout Rose, in the money in her last eight starts, deserves the nod in this field. Gets in light and has the speed of the party, I do believe. Goantell scored over this track and is a threat. Aella should be in the pay.

Fourth race—Meridian Time is tossed in this good field with feather weight. Should like the soft track and I would not be surprised to see this one lead all the way. Jadaan ran a fair race last out despite being fourth. Deserves attention. Inactive for the show.

Fifth race—Wahcoo is a gamble but might be a profitable one in this field. If the sulky gelding decides to get off with his field, he's going to be right there at the finish. I'm going to take my chances. Shot Up had trouble in the early stages last out. Would be dangerous with better racing luck. Royal Business has a chance.

Sixth race—Luna Bright was allowed to drop out of it last out and closed like the wind. With better handling this one can win. Penway is as good as his numerous fine efforts. Sumac for the show end.

Seventh race—Sun Sweep won as she pleased from a sprint field. Gives every indication of wanting to go this longer route. Early Gull and Tuleyries Star to take care of the others.

Eighth race (Substitute)—If this race is used I'll take White Sweets, Green Water and Razzle Dazzle.

Best bet—Luna Bright.

Tribe Beats A's, 10 to 8

Indians Score 2 in 8th to Win Game.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Aug. 30.—Earl Averill's base on balls, a double by Hal Trosky followed by "Bad News" Hale's single gave Cleveland two runs in the eighth inning today and a 10-to-8 victory over the Athletics in a seesaw game.

The Indians were behind, 8 to 7, going into the eighth because of Bill Werber's two-bagger in the seventh.

In the ninth Bruce Campbell homered off Lynn Nelson to give Cleveland its last run. Jeff Heath earlier blasted two circuit blows for the visitors while Sammy Chapman got his fourteenth of the year for the Athletics.

Yankees Defeat Tigers, 3 to 1

Bengals Held To Five Hits By Chandler

Bronx Bombers Extend Present Streak to Five Straight.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 30.—All the scoring was confined to the first inning today as the Champion Yankees ran their latest winning streak to five straight by edging out the Detroit Tigers 3 to 1.

Spud Chandler pitched five-hit ball for his thirteenth decision of tahe year against only four defeats, and held the Tigers to three hits after the first inning. In the opening frame Detroit got its lone tally on Charley Gehringer's three-bagger to center, the only extra base hit off Chandler, and a single by Hank Greenberg.

Frank Crosetti greeted George Gill in the Yankee half with his seventh home run into the leftfield lower deck. Red Rolfe's single, a double by Joe DiMaggio and an intentional pass to Lou Gehrig filled the bases and set the stage for Bill Dickey's game-winning single that brought home Rolfe and DiMaggio.

The Yanks got only three more hits off Gill before he left in the eighth for a pinch-hitter, and none at all off George Coffman. But with Chandler in his best form—he didn't issue a single base on balls—their opening assault proved ample.

Since the Red Sox lost to the Browns, the victory put another notch on the world champions' lead, which now is 15 games.

Browns

A's against the old Boston Braves years ago.

The Browns found him no easy mark. Though they scored two runs and drew four passes, they could collect only three scattered hits from his fast-ball delivery. Doc also struck out the first man to face him, only to suffer the ignominy later of seeing three bases stolen on him—two on a double steal.

New York, Aug. 30 (AP).—Hammerin' Henry Armstrong, the little brown man who holds three world boxing titles, will ay his welterweight championship on the line November 2 against Ceferino Garcia, the heavy fisted Filipino, considered the man most likely to stop the Los Angeles Negro.

Promoter Mike Jacobs closed negotiations for the bout today after a series of telephone calls to Armstrong's manager, Eddie Mead, who is in Los Angeles. The 15-round match will be held in Madison Square Garden.

Joey Archibald Starts Training For Dupre Fight

Joey Archibald, stricken almost on the eve of his bout with Tony Dupre last week, yesterday resumed training for the engagement which will be fulfilled September 12, at Griffith Stadium. Dupre, who was at his peak, is laying off to guard against overtraining, and will not resume work until later in the week.

The rival mangers, Al Weill, Archibald's pilot, and Al LeFevbre, meanwhile posted weight forfeit checks of $500, although this appeared to be an unnecessary gesture, inasmuch with an opportunity of being recognized as the next feather-weight champion within their grasp both boys are certain to make the 126-pound limit.

Weill also squelched an attempt to stretch the 10-round bout to 15, demanding that the original contract, which called for the shorter distance, be carried out to the letter. His efforts to have admission prices raised on the strength of the fight's importance, were spiked in turn by Promoter Joe Turner and Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn. They insisted on the usual scale of $1.10 general admission, $1.65 for box seats, and $2.30 ringside, pointing out that they owed it to the fans who supported their shows throughout the year.

Dusek Choice Over McCoy

Winner May Get a Crack at Steve Casey.

Although he virtually abandoned all hope of booking a rematch between Ernie Dusek, the challenger, and Steve Casey, the champion, after Dusek's rough treatment of the Irishman in their first bout this summer, Promoter Joe Turner admitted last night he is toying with the idea of trying to get them together again before autumn.

Turner, as a matter of fact, would like to match the winner of tomorrow night's bout between Dusek and "Bibber" McCoy, with Casey next week, or possibly within two weeks. He'd like to feature the match in the last outdoor show of the summer, which he hopes to make an all-star card.

Casey, vowing never again to step into a ring with a Dusek, shook the good American dust from his No. 12 brogans and sailed for Ireland immediately after winning over Dusek on a disqualification, but is expected back within a few days.

Pro Eleven Favored 6-5 Over Stars

Redskins

up. To every post a veteran Redskin has been assigned.

The Redskins' lineup that takes the field tomorrow will differ from the squad that won the league championship in one glaring respect, however. Cliff Battles, champion ground-gainer of the league, will be missing from the fullback post. It will be the Redskins' first experience without Battles, who is now an assistant coach at Columbia University.

Lacking Battles, the Redskins apparently lack a climax runner. In his position Flaherty has inserted rugged Max Krause, veteran of four years in the pro league, who was Battles' understudy last year. But on the Redskins' bench will be rookies better known than Krause for their ball-carrying prowess.

If the Redskins' passing attack bogs, Flaherty, it is believed, will send the rookies, George Karamatic and Dick Tuckey, into the backfield to try their hand at running the ball. Don Irwin, the team's No. 1 line crasher, is still favoring an injured knee and may not see action.

Baugh, too, is handicapped by a wrenched foot and if that injury is aggravated Flaherty may withdraw him in favor of Tuckey or Karamatic. Tuckey's passing and running talent recommend him for the job, but Karamatic's kicking is hugely in his favor.

But while he is in there, Slingin' Sammy will be the busiest man on the field. The Redskins' offense is wrapped entirely in Baugh. He will do the bulk of the passing, will do the kicking and, with Battles absent, he now rates as the best ball carrier among the starting backs, two of whom, Pinckert and Smith, are strictly blockers.

lose their jobs or win 'em. The Redskin coaches were going to learn much about their new talent.

Well, Dick Tuckey didn't fail that day. In fact, when the whistle blew, Dick Tuckey began immediate to act like the best football player on the field. In that second-team backfield, he literally crashed the regulars' line, knocked big pro-league stars sprawling with his 215 pounds of speed and leg drive. He ran through the Redskins for one touchdown and passed to another. He found time, too, to take a punch at no less than Ernie Pinckert. He was something to watch in that game and he had the rapt attention of the coaches.

Spared From Ax.

That display just about won Dick Tuckey a job with the Redskins. At least when the ax fell, cleaving a dozen rookies from the squad, Tuckey escaped. He commanded a new respect. He had begun to cause talk. In the frenzy to find a successor to Cliff Battles, Tuckey began to bulk large.

The suddenness of it all has sort of flabbergasted Tuckey. He hadn't bargained on making such a terrific impression on the Redskin coaches. He still looks at Baugh and Pinckert and Riley Smith with a bit of awe and wonders if Karamatic and Abbitt are really as good as they've been cracked up to be. But, more important, he's beginning to think that Dick Tuckey will do these Redskins some good.

And so does Ray Flaherty. Back in his thoughts, Flaherty has an idea that Tuckey will be a great help to the Redskins. He's certain, at least, that Tuckey will do 'em no harm. And at some point tomorrow night when Sammy Baugh needs a rest or if Baugh's injured foot forces him out, Flaherty is going to send Tuckey in there against the College All-Stars with instructions to "Go out there and play some ball for us . . . you know the kind I mean!"

And when Dick Tuckey trots out there tomorrow night, Mrs. Tuckey and the two Tuckey tots up in Danbury will be hoping that daddy lands a regular job. So will we, and so would you if you knew Dick Tuckey. We've got a hunch that he'll do all right for himself.

James Speyer, Noted Banker, Soon to Retire

Old International Firm, Antedating Napoleon, May Not Continue.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 30.—James Speyer, senior partner in Speyer & Co., one of the oldest international banking houses, confirmed reports today that he would soon retire. He is 77 years old. His statement left some doubt about the future of Speyer & Co.—a name as prominent in banking history as that of Rothschild, Baring and Warburg. Its now-extinct parent house in Frankfort, Germany, had a history extending back beyond the Napoleonic era.

Arriving on the liner Aquitania from a European visit, Speyer was asked about the reports of his retirement, which have been recently current, and said:

"Yes, that is so. But I don't know just when. As to the future of the firm, when I do retire, that has not been decided. I could not say whether it will continue or not."

Nephew in Firm.

Speyer, a widower, has no children. The only other bearer of the name still associated with the banking firm is a nephew, Herbert Beit von Speyer, now living in Switzerland. He is a partner in the New York firm and was in charge of the Frankfort house until its dissolution several years ago. In addition to the two Speyers, there are three other partners in the firm—George N. Lindsay, a member of the stock exchange, Charles G. Stachelberg and Otto de Neufville.

Speyer was born in New York City, the son of Gustavus Speyer, who founded the branch of the banking house in this country. He was sent to Germany for his education, entered the Frankfort branch of the firm, later trained in the London and Paris branches and returned to New York in 1885, becoming a partner in the New York house the following year. He has been senior partner since 1899.

General Buying Lifts Cotton

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 30.—Cotton advanced today on trade, foreign and commission house buying. December sold up from 8.31 to 8.43 and closed at 8.41, with final prices 14 to 17 points net higher.

The market opened 7 to 8 points higher in response to steadier foreign markets and indications of somewhat lessened tension over the European political situation. Foreign and trade interests were early buyers while the offerings came chiefly from local and New Orleans sources. Southern selling was noticeably smaller. In the afternoon Wall Street commission houses entered the market on the buying side while early sellers rebought.

Export Rivalry Helps to Lower Wheat Prices

Chicago Quotations Drop More Than a Cent; 2-Cent Drop at Winnipeg.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 30.—Signs of intensified competition among wheat exporting nations for the world's business and indications of some abatement in nervousness over European war threats helped to depress wheat prices today. Chicago quotations declined more than a cent in some cases, Winnipeg lost more than 2 cents, Rotterdam about 2 cents and Liverpool about a cent.

Heavy marketing of Canadian wheat, reflected in increased hedging pressure on the Winnipeg exchange, indirectly depressed values here and the pit also was unsettled by liquidation of September contracts before delivery begins Thursday. Foreign demand for American wheat was flat and no export business was reported although some Canadian wheat was sold.

Chicago wheat closed ⅝-1¼ lower, September, 62¾@62⅞; December, 64⅝@64¾; corn ⅜ off to ¾ up, September, 52⅝@52¾; December, 51; oats unchanged to ⅛ higher; rye, ⅜-⅝ down; lard 3 down to 5 higher.

Wallace Cracks Down On Commodity Brokers

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Wallace has called upon S. W. Gongoll, of Minneapolis, to show cause why he and eight firms described as being under his control should not be barred from all commodity exchanges for alleged violation of the commodity exchange act.

The Agriculture Department announced service upon Gongoll and the firms of a complaint signed by Wallace, alleging infractions of the act. Notice was given of a hearing September 14 in Minneapolis to determine whether the exchanges should be closed to the respondents.

The Market

By C. Norman Stabler, A Special Correspondent.

Hints of European Truce Results in Better Stock Prices but Less Trading.

New York, Aug. 30.—Hints of a truce in the perplexing Czechoslovakian tangle found their reflection in Wall Street today in moderately higher prices. Gains were not impressive when measured against the sharp declines of Monday, nor did the light volume of trading give any indication of a rush on the part of sold-out bulls to get back into the running.

The gain of the composite average amounted to 0.33 point compared with the break of 1.57 points Monday and today's volume was 630,650 shares against 1,248,850 shares the previous day.

The only similarity between the two sessions was that prices vibrated on developments abroad rather than on those on this side of the Atlantic. The long session of the British cabinet adjourned with indications that the Anglo-French entente will be calm but firm in making demands that Hitler halt the German interference in the Sudeten German issue in Czechoslovakia. The belief of Wall Street men with foreign connections is that war has been avoided for the time being at least.

While this contributed to the recovery in securities, the action of sterling in the foreign exchange market gave ample evidence of the nervousness which exists abroad. From the opening there was a rush into dollars in order to transfer funds to this country for safe keeping.

For the first time since May 11, 1935 the pound sank to below its former parity with the old American dollar, which was $4.8665. After crossing this point the pound got as low as $4.85⅞ yesterday, a net low since May 10, 1935, and it closed at $4.85 15-16, off a cent net for the day.

In the stock list the leaders showed plus signs predominating and many gained from 1 to more than 2 points. A few manufacturing issues, which had not been active in Monday's break, continued lower yesterday, but all other groups were firm to higher, attention being centered on the steels, motors and metals. Most active was General Motors, which has been setting the pace for the market for weeks. It closed up 1⅜ while Chrysler followed with a jump of 2¼ points. United States Rubber and Steel each added 1⅞. International Nickel was the most active of the metal shares, closing up 1⅝, and Bendix led the aviation department. Paramount came forward in the motion picture division.

Rails and utilities moved with the general trend, Southern Pacific being the most active carrier. After the close it was announced from Cleveland that the Nickel Plate directors had decided not to pay the $1,347,187 interest due tomorrow on the refunding mortgage 4½s. The road has a 60-day period of grace, so technically will not be in default until that time expires. Baltimore & Ohio directors approved the plan for voluntary deferment of interest on the road's bonds, but the actual terms of the plan have not yet been made public.

Cuts in posted prices of crude oil in the east Texas oil field did not keep the oils from moving with the general list. Fractional advances were made by Jersey, Texas, Socony and most of the other active members of this division. American Rolling Mill preferred recovered 2½ points after breaking 14 Monday on the passing of the dividend. Strong features included Westinghouse, Smelting, Bethlehem, Anaconda, Loews and duPont.

Wheat was affected by the abatement of nervousness over the European situation and also by evidence of keen competition between exporting nations for the world's business. Futures closed down ⅜ to 1⅛ cents.

Bonds Irregular.

Listed bonds went through another wabbly and uncertain session today, as traders remained aloof in the face of the conflicting reports from Europe. United States Government issues fell up to ¼ point, and best rated corporate issues were dull. In the speculative corporate section most moves were downward, but a few issues rallied along with equities. In the foreign department, Czech issues moved up 10 to 12 points, but this was held to be a reflection of better London market levels and some buying for the sinking funds of the bonds. Trading in all bonds amounted to $4,270,000, which is only half a normal day's business.

Declines in long term Treasury bonds during the formal trading period were offset to a degree by a late rally in the counter market, but small losses nevertheless were general for the day. The European difficulties added to the aloofness which large buyers usually exercise just before a new financing announcement. Guaranteed bonds of the farm and home corporations also were dull, while Treasury notes drifted lower in counter trading. Best rated utility, railroad and industrial bonds were inclined to move fractionally lower, but the losses were not important.

Czech Issues Strong.

Among speculative corporation bonds losses outnumbered the gains, but there were a few significant advances. Many of the intermediate and borderline carrier issues again receded, but gains predominated for some of the important systems, such as Southern Pacific and Southern Railway. Holding company bonds were dull, while communications issues improved. Local tractions, commodity issues and others were irregular.

The two issues of Czech government 8 per cent bonds advanced 10½ and 12½ points, respectively, but the gains occurred on a turnover of only 13 bonds, and were attributed to reflections of London trends and to modest buying for the sinking fund. French and Belgian issues were uncertain, and even the Scandinavians were off slightly. Australian and Canadian bonds were dull Japanese and Italian obligations displayed only their customary irregularity. In the defaut groups, movements were unimportant.

Boston Wool Market.

Boston, Aug. 30 (AP) (U. S. Department of Agriculture).—Quotations were showing no appreciable change from last week on the Boston wool market today. Holders of domestic wools were not making any great effort to close sales. Buyers for the most part were out of the market because of a lack of urgent need for wool. A few scattered cable reports received by private concerns in Boston indicated no changes in prices compared with the opening of the wool sales being held in Australia.

Home Building For July Sets Peak for Year

But Total for All Construction in Month Is 7.1% Below June.

New York, Aug. 30.—After reaching the highest volume for this year in June, building contracts receded in July to a level 7.1 per cent below the June peak, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute today. This was greater than the usual seasonal decline, which averaged 3.7 per cent in the last 13 years. As compared with the volume of a year ago, contracts awarded in July showed a decrease of 26.9 per cent.

The curtailment in July, however, was confined entirely to non-residential contracts. Such contracts were 19.8 per cent smaller than in June and 53.2 per cent smaller than in July last year. The curtailment of non-residential contracts was more than sufficient to offset further expansion in residential building.

Residential contracts in July were slightly larger than in June and consequently reached a new high peak for this year. In addition, for the first time in 1938, residential contracts were larger than in the corresponding month of 1937. The increase in July over the volume of a year ago amounted to 4.9 per cent.

Fundamental conditions continue to be unfavorable for building activity. Rents declined further in July to a new low for the current recession and the prospect is that this decline will be extended. In the face of this drop in rents, building costs have remained firm. The building cost index in July, on the basis of 1926 as 100, was 103.5, a figure far above the rent index of 85.05.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, Aug. 30.—The stock market closed irregular and, despite the absence of any constructive news regarding the European situation, sentiment among traders was mixed. European bonds were offered in large volume, and early losses ran from fractions to 2 points, some of which were regained later. Transatlantic issues recovered somewhat, but were 1 to 2 points net lower at the finish. Bargain hunting was in evidence after the liquidation had ceased, although trading was small. British funds closed firm but fractionally down, and other sections of the list were mixed.

Paris.—The bourse closed steady, with government bonds in better demand. International stocks were weak, with Royal Dutch and Suez Canal losing about 50 francs. Bank of France issue was off about 20 francs. The industrial group showed only small fractional changes at the finish.

Liverpool.—Wheat futures declined ¼d to ¾d to the extremely small demand from United Kingdom millers and reports of German and Italian buying of Hungarian wheat. Cotton futures moved up 3 to 4 points on Bombay and month-end trade buying. The market was lower early, easiness of overseas markets promoting hedging and liquidation.

Bob Burns Says—

I've always found that when two people look a whole lot alike, they'll prove to be a whole lot alike in other ways too. It's pretty hard to judge a person's character unless you happen to know somebody else that looks a whole lot like 'em.

The other day out here a fella sneaked up behind a woman and put his hands over her eyes and when she wheeled around, the man turned red in the face and says, "Oh, excuse me, lady, I thought you was my wife!—You look just like her."

The woman glared and says, "I'm glad I ain't your wife—you clumsy fool!" The man gulped and says, "Durn if you don't talk like her too!"

Convicts Relate Prison 'Baking' Death Horrors

Earle Orders State Police to Look Over Jails Every Week.

Philadelphia, Aug. 30.—Philadelphia County prison guards Alfred W. Brough and Francis Smith were held without bail on homicide charges today to await action by a coroner's jury in the "roasting to death" of four inmates, after three convicts testified that Brough and Smith had participated in the week-end of heat torture that drove some of them mad.

Parick Di Marco, 28, who has served about 4 years of a 25-year sentence, told questioners that he lost 15 pounds in the bake oven that was "Klondike" during three days.

Di Marco told how the "boys" endured the stifling heat caused by huge radiators lined along the punishment block until they could stand it no longer, and how some of them butted their heads against red-hot prison bars to end their agony.

"The boys screamed they were dying," Di Marco said from the witness stand under direct questioning by Assistant District Attorney John A. Boyle.

"We couldn't breathe. We screamed for water and air. Some of the boys hollered: 'Shoot us quick. Get it over with. Kill us fast and don't let us suffer.'"

Di Marco said the convicts bit their own flesh and screamed for their mothers and wives to save them.

He narrated how Joseph Forte, who had been placed in an adjoining cell with two of the men who later died, called to him that his cellmates were "cold and stiff and not breathing." He said when a guard finally came and Forte told him about the other two, the guard replied:

"That's their tough luck."

"Hollered 'Mother' All Night."

Morris Spatz, who was in the cell with the other two dead men, was called to give his version, which corresponded generally with Di Marco's.

"These two men," Spartz charged, nodding toward Smith and Brough, "turned the heat on us. I got down on my knees begging them to stop it. I almost cried. We couldn't breathe or stand up.

"Eddie Hayes (one of the men who were killed) hollered 'Mother' all night long. He trampled on me as I lay there. Jim (James McQuade, another of the dead men) was very quiet. It must have gotten him when he came in, for it was very hot.

"I cleaned the scum from the toilet hopper and jammed Jim's shirt into it to get some water.

"Sergt. James was the only kind man there. He opened the water up for us.

Head Big, Like a Football.

"But these two men," Spatz snarled, pointing to Smith and Brough, "turned it off tight."

He said in the morning of the third day, when it began to become light, "things didn't look right."

"Jim especially looked funny. He was quiet. I shook him. There was no answer. Then I looked at Eddie. His head was big like a football. He, too, never moved."

The story was told shortly after Gov. George H. Earles ordered the State motor police to start weekly inspections of the State's 500 penal institutions, to avoid a recurrence of "this horrible affair."

Earle's action was unprecedented in the State's penal history. He said he was taking the steps "because this case is so frightful it warrants unprecedented action."

Only 180 Cabs Still Uninsured

The number of taxicabs in the District still uninsured dwindled to 180, according to the latest reports released yesterday by the Public Utilities Commission.

Richmond Keech, vice chairman for the commission, said he expected the operators of these cabs would file certificates stating compliance with the taxicab liability insurance act within the next few days.
